

Chapter 114

The car...

It actually belonged to William and Felicity.

As if everything that happened came from the left field, everyone's jaws in the scene dropped open at once?

Why?

Didn't the two of them come here by carpooling with others?

How could this luxurious car belong to them?

This was absolutely absurd!

Rachel's face darkened almost immediately.

In front of so many of her ex-classmates, she had vowed that she would go back with the owner of this luxury car that night.

But she had been humiliated at this moment as if she had been slapped in the face.

She couldn't help but recall the glint of tease in William's eyes.

That scoundrel had fooled her again.

D*mn it!

The others began to chatter among themselves instantly after they came to their senses.

"What the f*ck? The car actually belongs to William!"

"They hid it so well," a girl blurted.

"If I knew they were so rich, I would have treated them well just now. I regret it now." A man sighed.

"It's all your fault, Rachel. You're such a snob! Now, we've offended Felicity and William!" a plump man growled.

They were flattering Rachel a moment ago but all of them, at this moment, had turned their coats and started to criticize her.

Rachel was already depressed and resentful, to begin with. When everyone was blaming her, she lost her temper immediately.

"D*mn! It's none of my business! Did I ask you all to speak down to them? What a bunch of b*stards!"

Rachel's words made everything worse.

The alumni gathering ended on a sour note eventually.

That was not the end yet.

When the shuttle bus arrived, they no longer bothered about Rachel. They all rushed for seats...

And leaving Rachel alone on the street.

Rachel stamped her feet in anger.

She couldn't help but think of William's handsome and cool face.

When she was shivering in the cold wind on the street, regret took over her inexplicably.

If she didn't help Nathan from the beginning but stood by Felicity's side, how would the ending be...

However, there were no ifs.

William and Felicity rushed all the way home. Felicity gazed at her handsome husband, who was always indifferent but calm while dealing with various affairs. She began to fall deeper in love with him.

"That's enough. You can stare at me as long as you want when we get back home. If you keep staring at me like this, we may end up in an accident," William quipped.

Felicity blushed and retorted, "Shut up. Who is staring at you?"

She didn't mean what she said. In fact, she was making eyes at him.

The next day, the Bai family officially became the exclusive agency of the Genuine Care Medical Center. The news took over Qena City by storm once again.

This time around, the people of Qena City knew that it was a woman who revived the whole Bai Family.

And that woman was Felicity!

Early in the morning, William arrived at the Genuine Care Medical Center. The two sleepyheads standing in front of him were Melissa and Lydia.

"How much have we made now?" William asked.

Melissa rolled her beautiful eyes. "Did you come here early in the morning to check the accounts? We have earned more than 200 million yuan."

Speaking of these 200 million yuan, she felt a faint excitement in her heart.

In the past, the Genuine Care Medical Center only earned five million yuan a year. However, after William joined them, they had earned 200 million yuan in only two months. It was incredible!

It was faster than robbing a bank!

However, William knitted his brows. "It's only 200 million. It's too slow."

His words made Melissa's eyes widened in disbelief at once.

"It seems that we can't earn as fast if we continue to stay in this one industry. I have to find another way to make money," William murmured, not paying attention to Melissa's expression at all.

Melissa peeled an orange and threw the peel at him angrily. Then she put the flesh into her own cup. "What scheme do you have? Just spit it out! I think my mental capacity can handle it now."

Recently, Melissa had been tortured a lot by William's schemes. Thus, she had built up a high resilience.

"When will Flavia's contract with their company end?" William asked abruptly.

"How would I know?" Melissa exclaimed, but she didn't dare to look William in the eyes.

William was smirking without saying anything.

"What the hell are you laughing at?" Melissa cursed decisively. The expression in William's eyes was unusual.

"Aren't both of you best friends? She came back last night and was in the resort. She must have contacted you," said William.

Melissa's body trembled. She couldn't hide anything from this little b*stard.

"It will expire in a month. Are you going to be involved in the entertainment industry?" Melissa wondered.

"We can't put all our eggs in one basket. It's a given that our energy is limited. Thus, it could be a good investment. After all, the entertainment industry is booming. Why shouldn't I make money from it?" William replied matter-of-factly.

Melissa's heart skipped a beat. She knew that this little b*stard was up to something.

Moreover, she did not know when he first started scheming and how much progress he had made.

"You can talk to Flavia when she comes by later. She has been in a bad mood recently. Be careful with your tone. Being gentle to girls won't hurt you!" Melissa reminded him in a grumpy tone.

William nodded. Indeed, he was thinking about matters about Flavia these days.

Not long after, Flavia arrived. When she saw William, her eyes lit up.

For some unknown reason, she had a good impression of William.

Of course, she thought it was because William saved her before.

After the two of them exchanged a few words, Melissa stood by the side and monitored them.

If she caught William playing any tricks, she would beat him up on the spot.

However, William was polite and refined, which disappointed Melissa and Lydia. Then, they excused themselves by going to the toilet.

After they left, Flavia frowned. She couldn't help but let out everything she had been bottling up inside.

But from William's point of view, it was nothing more than the coercion and complexity in terms of human connections in the entertainment circle. Especially after Flavia became the spokesperson for the Genuine Care Medical Center, her director was very dissatisfied with her. Recently, he always used this matter as an excuse to force Flavia to take up more jobs.

William comforted Flavia.

Melissa, who had gone to the toilet outside, was just about to open the door when she heard a bitter voice coming from inside.

"William, why don't you take me in?"

Melissa got goosebumps all over her body.

What the f*ck!

"I've only been away for two minutes, and they're talking about getting together?" Melissa exclaimed in her heart.

"Have I time-traveled? Why would I hear such an absurd thing!"

When Melissa was going to open the door, she heard William say, "Alright, I will consider it."

William's outrageous reply caused Melissa to fly into a rage.

William told everyone that he was married, but he was flirting with another woman.

She pushed the door and entered promptly. Then she heard William added, "I've set up an entertainment company recently. I'll give you three days to think about it, and I will not bother you after that."

Melissa was stunned.

Were they talking about this?

Was it not about keeping Flavia as a mistress?

When Flavia saw Melissa coming in, she blushed instantly.

She didn't even dare to look at Melissa.

Melissa reckoned that Flavia had the same thought as her.

Flavia must have fallen in love with William, and she was resisting it.

Was William the only one talking about work here?

What an upright man!

Flavia felt restless. Then, she made an excuse and left in a hurry.

Melissa was about to scold William when he interrupted her thoughts. "Let's go to a place."
