

Chapter 10

Lara was sent to the operating room again, this time it took three full hours of rescue before Lara was sent out.

The doctor took off the mask and said solemnly: "The patient's condition is very bad. It is recommended that you have a heart exchange operation as soon as possible, or send her to a foreign country with the latest heart maintenance device, otherwise, her heartbeat can stop at any time."

Sarah's feet softened and she almost knelt on the ground, Stephen supported her in time.

"Doctor," Stephen said, "Tell me, if we send her abroad, how much would it cost?" The heart source is not easy to find, and Lara may not insist on that time.

So it is safer to send her abroad.

The doctor said: "Conservative estimate...at least 2.5 million."

This number made Sarah's heart sank, and Stephen's expression also changed.

More than two million, even if he sells the house, it is not enough.

What to do?

Sarah closed her eyes hard, and the only way she could think of now was to ask Brian for help.

Only then... After setting up Lara, Sarah found an excuse to leave.

Although she and Brian were married for four years, during these four years, she just lived in the villa and waited for Brian to return home, and never went to Brian's real home.

She can only find Brian in the company.

The reception lady at the door did not let Sarah in, or even let her wait in the reception room. She called Brian and was hung up all the time.

Sarah finally had to wait outside the office building.

She waited from noon until ten o'clock in the evening.

The employees in the company left one after another, the lights in the office building went out one after another, the dark night fell, and the temperature dropped sharply. The night breeze made Sarah tremble constantly, and her abdomen was always aching.

Finally, she saw the familiar shadow walking out of the building.

At the same time, a black nanny car drove up, passing by Sarah, and stopped in front of Brian who had just walked out.

The driver got out of the car, walked around, and opened the door for Brian with deep reverence.

"Mr. Davidson..."

Sarah trot over and shouted, "Can I have a chat with you?"

Brian paused before slowly turning to Sarah.

Sarah tightened her heart, and said in a dumb voice: "I know I shouldn't..."

"Get out!" Brian interrupted her.

Sarah suddenly got stuck in her voice, her face pale.

Brian retracted his gaze, bending over to get into the car.

"I'm pregnant!" Sarah said, "Mr. Davidson, I'm... pregnant."

Brian's body froze, and his dark and deep eyes stared at Sarah, "What did you say?"

Sarah said dumbly and hardly: "I...am...pregnant."

Brian stared at Sarah for a long time and suddenly smiled.

"What do you want to say? Is the b@stard in your stomach mine?"

Sarah was taken aback, but somehow she couldn't react: "Otherwise? He was two months old, and we hadn't divorced yet.

"..."

"Sarah!" Brian was suddenly violent, "Have I ever had anything to do with you? How dare you say that the wild species in your stomach belongs to me?" Sarah said in a daze, "Why? No? I just..."

"Brian." A soft woman's voice suddenly sounded in the car, "What the hell is going on?"

Brian's expression immediately softened a bit: "It's okay, it's just a crazy woman."

After speaking, he bent over to get into the car.

Sarah didn't know what was going on at the time, so she rushed over regardless, and slammed the door that was about to close.

She looked into the car, and inside, really sat Brian's fiancée, Lidya.

Lidya probably just came down from some banquet, wearing a gorgeous and gorgeous light gold dress, with exquisite makeup, earlobes, and dazzling diamond jewelry on her neck.

She is as beautiful as a princess.

The words in Sarah's throat suddenly got stuck.

Lidya smiled and looked at her, she was generous and dignified: "You young lady, what's the matter? Are you my fan and want me to sign?"

Brian pushed her hand away, and open the door. "I said, she is just a crazy woman."

After speaking, Brian closed the car door with a bang.