

Chapter 59

Regan looked at Dr. Elliott sharply and asked coldly, "What if I told you, that this abnormal reaction of mine occurs whenever that woman is around?"

Dr. Elliott was stunned. A woman?

His heart was beating faster than usual and he felt his temperature rising?

If that was the case, wasn't it apparent?

There was no problem with the heart to begin with. It was just him pining over a woman.

At this time, Max, who was beside, too had a complicated look in his eyes. He and Dr. Elliott could only exchange glances and that said it all.

Dr. Elliott immediately figured out what was going on and so did Max too.

After all, they were all men...

However, Max could only sigh silently in his heart. Mr. Morris was making such a big deal out of it due to his inexperience.

He had always been a heartless person, thus he did not understand what was love.

Due to being a clean freak, he felt disgusted towards women and disliked being touched by anyone.

It was no wonder that Mr. Morris himself could not understand why he had felt so. After all, this was something that had never happened before!

Although Max was in disbelief, he still had to come up with a reason. Mr. Morris was in fact in love!

Quickly, Dr. Elliott braced himself and explained, "Mr. Morris, please rest assured, your body is in good health. However, I have a conclusion. Your condition is not caused by any physical disease; instead, it is a psychological reaction. When a man is attracted to a woman's charm, his heart beats faster and starts to feel warm. This is... a man's instinct! You have nothing to worry about! After all, the reaction between men and women is instinctive. It seems that you are in love....."

Hearing that, Max immediately sensed that things were not going well, because he clearly knew how arrogant Mr. Morris was!

Sure enough, Regan rarely had the patience to listen to Dr. Elliott's explanation. However, when he heard the last sentence, the pen in his hand was crushed on the spot.

His eyes turned cold, and his voice once again turned icy, as he stared at Dr. Elliott as if he was about to hunt his prey. "Do say it again... What am I feeling you said?"

It was at this moment, Dr. Elliott realized that there was something wrong with Regan, because the atmosphere around him had changed!

Dr. Elliott's eyes were full of fear. Only then did he realize that he had spoken wrongly! Mr. Morris's face had even changed. It was terrifying indeed.

"I... I was wrong... What I meant was, this is just a man's instinct. The last sentence I said is wrong... Mr. Morris, I'm sorry. I shall slap my mouth!" In order to save his life, Dr. Elliott could only desperately take back his words whilst slapping himself.

Meanwhile Regan clenched his fists.

He had fallen for her?

How could this be possible!

This was completely nonsense!

It was the most ridiculous and impossible thing he had heard in his life!

Who was he?

And who was she?

So how could he fall in love with a pet!

How dared this man say such a thing to him? He simply had a death wish!

With a snort, Regan asked, "I only want to know if there is a way to eliminate this kind of reaction, to prevent my heart from beating so fast, and feeling warm all over!"

Hearing that, Dr. Elliott felt even more miserable!

This was no difference from asking how to not love that woman!

Yet he dared not tell the truth anymore, for he was afraid that Mr. Morris would strangle him on the spot!

Dr. Elliott therefore responded in a squeaky voice, "I... I think... you should avoid her for the time being. Don't see her, don't touch her... and don't think about her. After some time, we should be able to eliminate this strange feeling in your heart." This should be the best way, though this was actually the way to deal with heartbreaks.

However, just as Dr. Elliott fell silent, Mr. Morris's face turned even darker!

Without hesitation, Regan snapped, "Impossible! It's impossible for me not to see her or to touch her..."

After all, that woman was his pet!

If he couldn't see her or hold her in his arms at night, he could not sleep and would feel even more agitated!

And now he couldn't live without her at all.

Even the slightest thought of not being able to see that woman made Regan burst into anger and he started reprimanding, "What bullsh*t is this... I don't want to see you! What a bunch of nonsense... Get out of my sight!"

Hearing that, Dr. Elliott nodded quickly and stuttered, "Yes... yes... Mr. Morris."

He couldn't help but let out a sigh of relief as he left the consulting room.

Being in Mr. Morris's presence was truly frightening, and it made him constantly feel uneasy!

Meanwhile, Max, who was still by Mr. Morris's side, felt even more nervous.

However, he assured himself that what would be, would be!

"Do you think... What he said is true? That I... have fallen in love with her?" asked Regan.

Whatever the doctor had said was nonsense! Did he really fall in love with her just because his heart skipped a bit?

Max smiled bitterly in his heart. Could he just say it? Mr. Morris got irritated at the sight of him pulling Miss Wilkinson's hand, and this was obviously jealousy! Mr. Morris's heart would start to race whenever Miss Wilkinson was near him, and this was clearly a sign of excitement!

But he just couldn't say it directly!

Unless one day, the arrogant Mr. Morris, admitted it himself!

Perhaps, there would never be such a day!

With that thought in mind, Max could only bite the bullet and blurted out, "Mr. Morris... I... I'm still single! I... I have never had a girlfriend, so I don't know!"

It was best to say that he had no idea.

However, Regan looked at Max suspiciously and snorted. "...Useless! Serves you right for not having one."

"..." Max was speechless.

Knowing that he couldn't find answers from others, Regan felt that he could only rely on himself for answers.

Therefore, he calmly instructed Max, "Get me books relating to this matter and put them on the bookshelves in my study. After all, don't books hold the answer to everything?"

"Mr. Morris, then... how many books do you want?"

Regan said with a poker face, "Replace all the books in the library..."

Just as Max was about to turn around and leave, he heard Mr. Morris continue speaking from behind.

"However, replace all the book covers. Don't let anyone see it! Do you hear me?"