

Found Pregnant After Divorce by Emiissmx Chapter 5

Chapter 5 Pity

Kingston looked away and walked towards the villa.

The servant showed the girl around. She was exhausted by the flight and went back to her bedroom for a rest

Kingston checked the information with his secretary, Quincy Fischer.

"She's Vivian's younger sister. She's an illegitimate child and doesn't live with the Hardins. That day, she went to visit Vivian and happened to see Vivian drug you. She wanted to save you, but...

You destroyed Vivian and her family. Their company went bankrupt, and they had to live in the slum. Vivian vented her anger on her and tortured her for three whole months. She was on the verge of death and had some mental problems when she was sent to the hospital. Our people searched through all the information about Chinese girls in Phelan City and found that she was the only match.

Her name is Sandra Hardin."

Kingston trusted Quincy. After careful investigation, Sandra was the only match.

Kingston felt unhappy when he thought of what Sandra had suffered in the past three months.

"Get the best doctor to take care of her. No one will dare to hurt her here."

Quincy nodded and turned to leave.

Kingston came to the bedroom door and looked at the sleeping girl inside.

She was the first and only woman he had sex with.

He must protect her well.

He closed the door and left. He would have a videoconference later.

A servant came out from the guest bedroom after finishing the cleaning. It was Krista's room.

She had lived in the villa for a year and had never entered the master bedroom or study. She had always been well-behaved.

If it wasn't for Sandra, he would have felt that Krista was a good wife. At the very least, she made him feel very comfortable.

She never made trouble for him in their marriage.

And she agreed to the divorce without hesitation.

Kingston thought she was cowardly, but now it seemed that she was a stubborn girl who could bear patiently.

Thinking of Krista's words, he stopped the servant and asked, "Did she leave anything here?"

"Do you mean Ms. Compton? No, she brought a suitcase with her when she came and left with the same suitcase. She didn't bring anything in the room with her."

"She didn't bring anything with her?" This surprised Kingston.

"Yes. She didn't spend any money from the Irwins.

And she left all the things that your grandmother and mother gave her in the room. You can have a check," the servant replied.

Krista was approachable and didn't put on airs. She usually talked and ate with the servants, and helped them with their work.

If it was too hot and too cold, she showed sympathy for them and wouldn't make them too tired.

She opposed extravagance and waste. She just needed enough food and would not ask for more.

Everyone was very sad that such a good-tempered young lady had left just like that.

As soon as Krista left, Kingston brought back another woman and showed great concern for her. The servants felt pity for Krista.

In their eyes, Kingston was a scumbag.

"Mr. Irwin, if there is nothing else, I'll go downstairs."

Then the servant left with some resentment.

Kingston frowned. Krista really surprised him.

Krista went back in a daze and saw Siobhan's car halfway.

Siobhan got out of the car and looked at Krista arrogantly.

"Get in the car and go home. We have something to ask you."

It was as if she was talking to a criminal, which made Krista somewhat unhappy.

"I have nothing to say to you. I have to go to school."

Although Krista was a Compton, she couldn't compare with a servant in her family.
