Chapter 1627 /m the Only One Who Didn't Know

Clayton finished freshening up. He went upstairs to change his clothes and came back down with a list in his hand, which he handed over to Kai. "Grant and Aida have already left. I didn't have time to give it to them, so can you pass this on for me?"

Kai wrinkled his eyebrows. He took it and looked at the long list of books.

"What's this? 'A Guide for Babies and Toddlers', 'What to Do When Your Child Cries', 'How to Be a Qualified Parent... What's all this?"

Clayton paused. "I've read these books before and found them quite useful, but some of them aren't available here. I'll get someone to bring them back from abroad. These are available here, so Grant and Aida don't have to waste their time looking around..."

In terms of raising children, Clayton was really experienced.

Nicole nodded. "Grant and Aida will definitely need it!"

Kai did not understand and looked up in a daze. He was puzzled.

"Why would they need this?"

Clayton said, "Isn't Aida pregnant? She can start making preparations. Early preparation has its advantages. She shouldn't just rely on the nannies. After all, they're outsiders

Kai still did not react to Clayton's words.

"Pregnant? Aida's pregnant?!"

Kai was in disbelief.

Nicole raised her head with the same incredulous look.

"You don't know?"

Clayton also looked at Kai the same way.

Kai pointed at himself speechlessly. "I didn't know!"

No one told him!

Kai looked at the two people and suddenly had some inexplicable anger in his heart. "All of you know about this?!"

Nicole and Clayton nodded their heads.

Kai suddenly felt so aggrieved. "Does the whole family know? Am I the only one who didn't know about it?"

Nicole paused and did not answer.

That was most likely the case.

Kai said, "No wonder Grant wanted to kill me when I asked Aida to drink last night..."

Kai was dispirited when he left. Nicole and Clayton simply cleaned up. The two of them rarely got to enjoy their time alone.

They were a little bored, so they decided to go out for a walk.

They went to a nearby university town not far away, but Nicole was worried about Clayton's health. Clayton was adamant that there was no problem.

Nicole wanted to take the subway, but when she thought of Yvette's phone call this morning, they decided to drive there.

The car could not enter the food street. They walked to the front and bought whatever snacks which looked nice. Luca and the others followed not far behind them.

Clayton was interested in everything and listened patiently as Nicole explained how these snacks were made.

Although Nicole only understood a little, she spoke so eloquently that she could fool people.

As they walked, someone called out to Nicole in front and waved toward her.

"Nicole!"

This voice was quite familiar, but Nicole could not remember who it was.

That person turned around and arrived in front of Nicole.

"Nicole, I really wasn't mistaken! I haven't seen you in a long time. Why didn't you show up to the past few salons?"

Hayley was the daughter of Golden Sea Corporation's President. Since the last time Ava York failed to become Hayley's stepmother, Hayley was revitalized and would attend all kinds of social gatherings. She also spoke with confidence.

Nicole was a little surprised. Her voice was light as she asked, "Why are you here?"

Hayley patted her chest. "I'm studying here! Previously, I was abroad for an exchange program and felt uneasy. I don't wanna come back and find out that my father has illegitimate children! So, I simply decided to stay."

Nicole was used to Hayley's straightforward personality. She laughed and said, "Wow, you have the mood for that? Are you here for a party?"

"I'm having lunch with a few classmates. Wanna join us?"

Hayley looked at the slightly pale but handsome gentleman standing next to Nicole and was slightly dumbfounded.

"Nicole, you haven't broken up with him yet?"

Chapter 1628 Manipulative and Scheming Man

Nicole and Clayton were dumbfounded.

Clayton's face darkened.

He was annoyed and he looked away. 'I shouldn't be calculative with a kid...'

Clayton just squeezed Nicole's palm to express his dissatisfaction.

Nicole laughed lightly. "Why would I break up with him?"

"This guy looks even weaker than before, as if he can just drop dead at any time. You should be with someone a little healthier, that can live longer..."

The corner of Clayton's eyes twitched. He was speechless.

Nicole let out a laugh. "Don't worry. He'll live long enough. He's just not feeling well recently."

Hayley nodded superficially and still had her doubts.

Soon after, Hayley smiled and spoke.

“Do you want me to be your guide? I’m very familiar with this place, so I know what’s nice here!”

Nicole was just about to refuse when Clayton, who was on the side, could not help but speak up.

“Sorry, I’m not feeling too well. I’m afraid that I can’t walk too far...”

Hayley did not conceal her disgusted gaze as she sized him up. ‘So what if he’s good-looking? He looks like a sick chicken...?’

Nicole quickly and nervously took his arm.

“You don’t feel well? Do you want to take a rest? Or do you want to go straight to the hospital?”

Clayton smiled and patted her hand. “I’m just a little tired. It doesn’t matter. Let’s go later?”

Of course, Nicole would not refuse.

Nicole turned around and said goodbye to Hayley. She then pulled Clayton into a cafe across the street.

Hayley stood there with her arms folded. She shook her head. ‘What a manipulative scheming man... Hmph! I could see through it at a glance!’

In the cafe, Clayton sat there, looked out the window, and breathed a sigh of relief.

It was great to finally have some peace.

Nicole saw that Clayton’s face did not change and believed that he was just tired.

The waiter came over. “Excuse me, what would you like to order?”

Nicole looked at him. “Sparkling water for him and a mocha for me please.”

“Sure, please wait a moment.”

Nicole smiled and looked at him. “You don’t need to go to the hospital?”

Clayton raised his eyebrows. “No need. I’ll be fine soon.”

He saw that Hayley had left and went back to her group of classmates.

Nicole saw through Clayton's thoughts and could not help but laugh a little.

"If you don't want her to be our guide, just say so. I was going to refuse anyway."

Clayton paused. His warm face blushed a little.

"I just think that she's too loud."

The two of them finished their drinks and continued to walk. They looked around at the youthful smiles and became more relaxed.

Nicole could not help but sigh. "It's nice to be young!"

Clayton paused and looked at her with unblinking eyes. "You're perfect like this."

Even if others were young, they were not Nicole.

The Nicole in front of him was unrivaled in the world.

Nicole smiled with curved eyes. Half of her body was lying on Clayton, but Clayton did not feel any weight. He just felt like he was dragging a small child along.

They were very happy.

When they were tired of walking, they took a break.

Nicole looked at the road in front and suddenly spoke.

"Angie's out. She'll be extradited to Southeast Asia."

Clayton paused for a moment, pursed his lips, and said, "Do you hate her?"

Nicole shook her head. "It has nothing to do with her. In fact, when I was taken, Caleb took care of me. At least, he didn't really treat me as a hostage. It's just that when he learned that the deal fell through, he made a reasonable move."

This reasonable move was to eliminate the hostage.

There was a moment of silence.

Those gloomy and boring days seemed to surface again.

Nicole spoke softly, "I didn't know that some people are living such a horrible life. They don't treat people as human beings, and they're extraordinarily desensitized to the misery of their companions. I told you about those women before."
