Chapter 26

Chapter 26 The Strange Project Manager

In the study of the Bennet family' s mansion... “Miss Bennet, who did you say Mr. Sullivan asked you to investigate?” Andy asked, looking at Rachel. She looked away from the computer screen and met Andy' s gaze. “The project manager of the KD Group. What' s the matter? Is there something strange about that person?”

After saying that, she looked at the computer again. Rachel had just returned from the Sullivan Group' s building. On her way back, she googled the KD Group using her mobile phone, and she now had a general idea of the company. The KD Group' s headquarters was located in Wall Street, and it started as an oil mining company. Later on, they bought several mines to exploit raw gemstones.

At present, it was now supplying raw materials for thirty percent of the jewelry brands all around the globe. The Sullivan Group had been wanting to enter the jewelry industry and create an independent brand. Recently, the KD Group had been intending to raise funds of their own, and Victor wanted to know who was in charge of financing the project.

Probably, because he wanted the Sullivan Group to enter the market through participating in KD' s financing. The information scattered on the Internet was varied. Rachel only skimmed a few of them, but she never found any information on the financial manager of this project. Obviously, she wasn' t happy about it. It was acceptable for the manager' s private information like birth date or experience to not be present on the Internet, but it made no sense that the person' s name and gender couldn' t be found as well.

“Miss Bennet, I think we should give up on looking for this person.” Andy put down a book on economic laws and walked to Rachel' s side. She then closed the web browser, glanced at him, and asked, “Why? What' s so special about this KD Group?” “You' re never going to find any information about it because Mr. Sullivan knew that already.

He did it on purpose. I' m sure he wanted to scare you off.” Andy sat down to contemplate for a moment. Seconds later, he said, “The KD Group is just a supplier of raw gemstones. It' s not the biggest in the world, and there' s nothing special about them. It' s just that this specific manager is quite peculiar.”

Chapter 27 The King Of Hearts

A smile appeared on Andy's lips when he looked at Rachel's pure eyes and heard the almost same thing from Rachel that Elisa had once said. Seeing that Andy smiled all of a sudden, Rachel found it strange. "Are you laughing at me because you think my ideas are whimsical?" "Of course not," Andy denied hastily.

"I just remembered your mother." Rachel frowned upon hearing that. She leaned back against the chair, and asked, "My mother?" There was little she knew about her mother. Elisa passed away not long after she gave birth to Rachel. She heard that her mother died succumbed to postpartum metrorrhagia. In addition, Elisa was frail because of years of overworking. That was the reason she couldn't make it in the end.

As soon as Shelia sent that message, the person she was in contact with tried to invite her to a video call, but she declined the invitation. [Q]: Boss, is it really you? Why aren't you answering my video call? Shelia couldn't answer it, because she wasn't in her original body, she was in Rachel's. If she accepted the video call, the person would see Rachel's face, and that was the end of it.

Even if she managed to narrate Shelia's entire life, nobody would believe she was actually Shelia. After all, something as fantastical and mysterious as rebirth was unbelievable.

But since she had claimed she was Shelia, she must find a way to prove it. Her eyes darkened as she invited Q to a voice call.

Fortunately, Rachel's voice was similar to her own. It would be difficult to tell the difference if the listeners didn't listen carefully.

On top of that, although her soul was trapped in Rachel's body right now, she knew she was still Shelia. She could still act and talk just like the Shelia Q knew. Soon, the man answered the call; his voice, trembled with excitement. "Boss, is that really you?" he stammered.

Rachel took a sip of water from the nightstand and cleared her throat. "It's me, Quintin." The moment Quintin heard her familiar voice, he was sitting in front of his computer, and he jumped up while holding his slim laptop. His eyes widened in surprise as he looked at the was indeed his boss'. "Boss! It's really you, isn't it?"

Quintin freed one of his hands to rub his eyes. He just couldn't believe what was happening. "How many more times are you going to ask me that question? Yes, it's me! It's Shelia, you dolt.” Rachel shook her head helplessly, and said, “If you don’ t believe me, ask me anything.”

Chapter 29 I Have Never Doubted You

After hearing Rachel’ s answer just now, Quintin was almost certain that she was Shelia, who had been pronounced to be dead.

“We managed to complete our mission. But before we left, we made a mistake and didn’ t clean up all our traces. Our enemies took advantage of it and found a way to pinpoint our location. In order to get revenge, they intercepted our escape halfway. You were shot in the abdomen and left thigh respectively, and my shoulder was cut. Fortunately, the rescue team arrived in time to save us,” Rachel replied after a moment of contemplation.

Suddenly, the memories came flooding into Quintin’ s mind. He lowered his head, feeling guilty and regretful. In a hoarse voice, he said, “Boss, I’ m so sorry…” He was the one to blame for the mistake they made that time. His carelessness and underestimation of their rivals gave the enemies the chance to track the two of them down, and it might’ ve led to their deaths.

“Now, do you believe me?” Rachel knew that this was a thorn in Quintin’ s heart, so she quickly changed the topic. “Boss,”

Quintin stammered. “Boss, you really are alive! I’ m so glad you’ re still alive!” Rachel was surprised to hear Quintin’ s statement. Judging from what he said, it seemed that he always believed that Shelia was still alive. “Boss, where are you right now? What happened to you? And why did Wallace say that you died because of an infectious disease in prison?”

Oh, by the way, did you know that Wallace and Tara are now together?” Quintin gritted his teeth in anger. “Your best friend has been fooling around with your fiance. They got the marriage certificate not long after your funeral. They also said that it wouldn’ t be appropriate for them to hold a wedding ceremony shortly after your death.

They said they’ d just get a marriage license for the time being, and delayed the wedding for your sake. Bah! They’ re despicable!” Quintin spat. Upon hearing that revelation, Rachel sneered. ‘I died of an infectious disease?’

Chapter 30 Why Can’ t You Just Trust Me For Once

The following day, at nine in the morning, there was only one hour left before the twenty four hour deadline. Rachel arrived at the first floor of the Sullivan Group’ s building as they had agreed upon Ivan was waiting on time in the hall. He approached Rachel as soon as he saw her. “Miss Bennet,” he greeted. “Mr.

Sullivan is still in a meeting. I' ll take you upstairs.” Ivan' s face as stoic as always. Rachel nodded in agreement.

Ivan surveyed her casually, and saw that she didn' t bring anything with her. ‘It seems that she didn' t find anything,’ he thought Ivan decided not to ask any questions, and led Rachel to the CEO' s office using the private elevator. Once they arrived in Victor' s office, Ivan ordered a secretary to bring Rachel a cup of coffee, and then he left to take care of his own business.

At this time, she was sitting on the sofa, sipping coffee and looking around the office The decor of the office suited Victor' s personality. The predominant colors were black and white, creating a stoic ambiance. The majesty embodied in the decoration made people nervous and vigilant for some reason. This wasn' t the first time that Rachel had come here. In the past, she often made a scene in his office because she was Victor' s wife, and the hostess of the Sullivan family.

However, the welcome she received from Victor was his poker face. Each time, he would look annoyed, and ask the security guard to throw her out. Just when Rachel put down her coffee, the office door was opened from outside. “Mr. Sullivan…” Rachel heard a voice as the person entered. The person who came in was surprised to see Rachel, and she stared at her in disbelief. “Rachel! What are you doing here?” said Alice.

After saying that, she strode towards Rachel. Rachel, on the other hand, crossed her legs and leaned back lazily. She raised her head and smirked. “Well, you’ re allowed to be here, so why can’ t I?” she remarked. “No, you can’ t!” Alice screamed, reaching out to grab Rachel’ s arm, “Get out!” Before Alice could reach her, Rachel’ s eyes glinted, and she managed to grab Alice’ s wrist before the woman could touch her.
