

Chapter 94

At the same time, Penelope told Hazel softly, "Miss Wilkinson, please have arrived. I'm sure you'll be very happy to meet them."

Hearing her words, Hazel's eyes widened in shock. Did Regan really promise?

Instinctively, Hazel felt nervous and clenched her clothes tightly as her thoughts. What should she do?

In these few days, she had thought about meeting her family, but when she panicked.

However, she should tell her sister and mother about her situation...

After trying to calm herself for a few minutes, Hazel went to the bath and cold water for another few minutes to clear her messy mind.

As she wiped off the water on her face, she looked at herself in the mirror. Anything about Regan—it wasn't only because of the contract that she her family would benefit from nothing by knowing Regan. Furthermore, Regan definitely didn't want the others to know anything about him.

When Regan previously said that he could take away and return the C everything with just a word, he wasn't joking at all. Hazel had already and didn't want the two families to offend him again.

After she came out, Penelope asked softly, "Miss Wilkinson, do you want Mr. Morris had asked someone to send you some new jewelry..."

Shaking her head, Hazel decided to keep her simple and casual wear;

Suddenly, Hazel couldn't help but ask Penelope, "Is... Abigail not returning fault..." After Regan knew what Abigail had done, she was transferred Knowing Regan's cruelty towards others, she pleaded to him countless times to be punished.

However, he only told her that Abigail would return at the appropriate time.
Later, when she mentioned this again, Regan questioned her in an over-the-top manner: "That much to you? All you can think of is me! You're not allowed to care about anything else."
asking.

At her question, Penelope respectfully answered, "Please rest assured that I will be back on my feet in a few days and will come back soon." In fact, she didn't tell Hazel that Abigail's condition was more serious than she imagined, except that the girl needed to train from scratch in the basics of combat. Regan died on the spot. However, thanks to Hazel's repeated pleading, Regan's death was postponed.
Hearing Penelope's words, Hazel felt relieved for a moment.

.....

While they were waiting for the person, Scarlett and Vanessa were full of questions.
Who were they waiting for?
Which big shot was coming to meet them?

However, when they clearly saw the woman's face as she walked down, they were filled with disbelief.

Although Hazel was wearing a simple dress, her temperament was different from the other two; she seemed colder and more noble.

Furthermore, despite her bad complexion, it was obvious that she did not lack time. On the contrary, she looked as if she had been cared for attentively, her skin was moist.

She was completely different from the two of them, who had suffered from illness; their faces were pale and their skins were poor.

However, what they couldn't accept the most was Hazel's appearance.

Could it be that the person who invited them here was Hazel?

When they thought of this, it was a bolt out of the blue; they could never have imagined it.

What right did Hazel have to live in such a luxurious and grand villa?

Moreover, they had ridiculed Hazel for a long time yesterday. They cursed the man and laughed at the thought of her losing the man's favor; they even... However, it seemed that Hazel was living more decent than they expected. At this point, Scarlett's heart was heavily disturbed; since young, she had been pampered and had enjoyed the best treatment in the world.

On the other hand, Hazel was always the illegitimate child that she treated as a slave. But now...

Jealousy burned in Scarlett's heart, devouring every piece of it; however, she still showed a smile that she always showed to Hazel. With anxious eyes, she immediately said, "I've finally found you, Hazel! I didn't expect you to be here! Ever since you disappeared, I've been consumed by guilt for not protecting you well... However, from that day on, I've been worried, afraid that you're living miserably... But now, I've finally found you, Hazel..."

Hearing her sister's caring words, Hazel felt ashamed and a sense of guilt. She might not know that the Collins and Wilkinsons had suffered a lot because of her, but she was cared for her well-being.

"I'm fine, Scarlett... I'm sorry to make you worry."

Holding Hazel's hand intimately, Scarlett said, "Everything's fine now... look at you. How are you feeling? Why didn't you contact us? This silly

"I-I'm really sorry... I'm fine. Don't worry." Unable to reveal her bitterness that she was "fine". Putting up a small smile, she hoped that Scarlett

However, her smile only seemed to pierce Scarlett's raging heart.

On the other hand, in the eyes of the outsiders, this would be a very h