

A Cue for Love chapter 824

Chapter 824

Chapter 824 Actions Speak Louder Than Words

Thinking that the elderly professor had followed him, Seamus turned around subconsciously.

The moment he turned around, Benjamin moved as quick as lightning and swung a punch at the former's head.

The blow knocked Seamus' spectacles askew, but he did not loosen his grip on the gun. He pointed the gun at Benjamin, ready to pull the trigger.

However, Benjamin was faster and more ruthless than Seamus. He pinned the latter's arms to his sides and managed to maneuver the gun in time so that it pointed toward the pharmacy's ceiling and merely fired into the air.

Bang!

The piercing sound of a shot fired rang out.

Immediately after that, a dogfight between the two men ensued.

Seamus gripped the gun tightly, desperately trying to aim it at Benjamin again.

Using one hand to grab Seamus' hand that held the gun, Benjamin balled his other hand into a fist and punched the man's eye repeatedly.

Every blow was accompanied by the sickening crunch of a fist against bone and flesh.

The lens in Seamus' spectacles shattered, and as Benjamin continued raining punches, the broken pieces cut into the former's skin, leaving a bloody mess around his eye.

Despite the acute pain, Seamus did not dare to let go and continued struggling to point the gun's barrel toward Benjamin with all his strength.

"Argh!"

The back of Benjamin's hand was raw and bleeding by the time he delivered his final blow, and it also drove the shards of the broken lens into Seamus' eye.

Unable to bear the pain, Seamus raised his hands to cover his eye, and Benjamin quickly seized the opportunity to knock the gun out of his hand.

Having lost his gun and suffering in agony from his injured eye, Seamus flew into a rage and attacked Benjamin again.

Although lacking in fighting skills compared to Benjamin, he was much more adept at employing underhanded tricks. He would resort to striking his male opponents in the crotch whenever he got into a fight. Thus attacked, Benjamin was temporarily incapacitated and could not even retaliate.

Suddenly, Seamus formed a claw with his fingers, intending to gouge Benjamin's eyes out while the latter's guard was down.

But just as his fingers were only two or three inches away from Benjamin's eyes, he suddenly felt something cold and hollow pressing on his temple.

"You!"

He knew full well what was pressing against his head at that moment.

Natalie's red lips parted as she said slowly and clearly, "If you dare to injure his eyes, I'll kill you with a single shot. If you don't believe me, you're more than welcome to test it yourself. Test and see whether I'm lying to you."

Hearing that, Seamus dared not act rashly.

Benjamin quickly spun around, twisted Seamus' arms behind his back, and pinned him to the floor.

But even as Seamus bled from his mouth, he declared arrogantly, "Do you think you can escape? Kill me, then! Kill me if you dare! I'm telling you. You can't escape! Mr. Gale is already on his way!"

"Shut up!" Benjamin growled.

Instead of expressing her frustration verbally like Benjamin, Natalie chose to make her point through her actions by shooting Seamus once in the shoulder.

Bang!

Following the loud bang of a gunshot, Seamus' shoulder started to bleed.

Natalie had taken aim carefully. Although she did not hit any of Seamus' vital points, it was enough to let him have a taste of excruciating pain.

"You..." Seamus began, groaning in pain. He had not expected her to actually fire at him.

Aiming the gun straight at his temple, Natalie sneered, "Weren't you acting all cocky just now? Why are you behaving like a wimp now? I have no interest in taking your life. As long as you tell me how to get out of here, I'll spare you."

Seamus snickered. "Don't hold your breath on that!"

Not wanting to waste her breath, Natalie fired another shot at his left shoulder.

Overwhelmed with pain and shock, Seamus stared at her wordlessly.

In a frosty tone, Natalie continued, "Just as you said, Mr. Gale is on his way right now. I don't want to waste time dilly-dallying with you here. All I want now is to know where the exit is to escape this place."

A Cue for Love chapter 825

Chapter 825

Chapter 825 See You In A Different Light

However, Seamus stubbornly refused to say anything.

Natalie's almond-shaped eyes turned cold, and she warned, "If you tell me where the exit is, you won't die right away. But if you refuse, you'll die right here, right now! An intelligent person will know nothing is more important in this world than one's life."

Despite her threat, Seamus still clenched his jaw tightly and remained silent.

"It doesn't seem like you intend to reveal anything. Well, it looks like the next shot will have to be at your heart..." With that, Natalie dug the barrel of the gun into Seamus' back.

There was no doubt that Seamus was terrified of dying. His heart was in his mouth when he felt the gun's barrel pressing into his back.

There's no saying when Mr. Gale will arrive. In any case, I can't just die here like this!

Just as Natalie was about to pull the trigger, Seamus finally blurted out, "Okay, okay! I'll tell you! The exit is inside the cabinet next to the power station. It's not a real cabinet. It's the only way out of the base."

Seamus felt as if a weight had been lifted off his chest after saying that.

But just then, two gunshots rang out. Seamus got hit twice, one shot in each knee, and crimson blood started flowing immediately.

Writhing in agony, he shouted, "You b*tch! How could you go against your word? I f*cking told you everything, yet you still shot me!"

"Seems like you were telling the truth," Natalie responded impassively.

Then, she shot Benjamin a look, indicating for him to let go of the young assistant. After all, he had gotten shot in the joints of each limb. While the injuries would not be fatal, there was no way for him to move at all.

"You b*tch! You dare to trick me?" Seamus glared at Natalie fiercely.

Glancing at him, Natalie replied lightly, "Hush... The more you talk, the faster you'll lose blood."

After collecting all the ampoules that possibly contained the antidote, Natalie and Benjamin's goal changed to getting themselves out of there safely.

Hence, they ignored Seamus as he lay on the floor and hurried toward the power station within the hidden underground research facility. The power station was large and eye-catching, so they quickly found it and located the cabinet.

It looked like a nondescript cabinet, but when Benjamin opened the door, he discovered it led to a dark passageway.

The sirens wailed louder and louder, and they could detect the sound of footsteps approaching from all directions.

"We have no time to lose."

Worried that the passageway would be unsafe, Benjamin bent down and crawled in first.

Natalie followed him closely, shutting the cabinet's door behind her.

Besides being dark and cramped, it was hard to see ahead clearly in the passageway, which made it challenging for Benjamin to make his way through.

Finally, it started getting a little brighter. Benjamin pushed aside the hard and hollow manhole cover, only to see that the passageway led to a warehouse above ground filled with goods piled up high.

Natalie and Benjamin had finally escaped safely!

The former walked up to one of the piles of goods and lifted the tarp covering them, only to see a shiny AK rifle before her eyes.

Natalie inhaled sharply. "Firearms?"

An underground bio lab with a warehouse of firearms above it! And on Chanaean soil!
It's simply outrageous!

"There's no time to look around. We have to hurry up and leave," Benjamin reminded.

"Okay."

Knowing that they were not out of the woods yet, they did not continue exploring the firearms warehouse and turned to leave.

Alas, when they opened the warehouse's doors to walk out, their gazes fell upon a man who had a cigarette between his lips and was pointing a gun directly at them.

Blowing a puff of smoke into the air, Gale uttered coldly, "Tsk, tsk, tsk... Natalie Nichols, you're way more capable than I thought. You possess such exceptional abilities that you even found the escape route from the base. No wonder your twin sister lost to you. You've made me see you in a different light time and time again. I don't even have the words to describe you!"