

A Cue for Love Chapter 998

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 998

Chapter 998 Reverse Psychology 2

Because Samuel's kiss on Natalie's lips were overly vigorous, she tried to avoid him. However, the man clasped his hand on the back of her head, forbidding her to shrink away.

His kiss was so intense it was as if he was a ferocious wolf who could not wait to devour her.

And that continued for a long, long time...

Only after the man was satisfied did he let go of Natalie. On the other hand, the latter was still gasping for fresh air because of that passionate yet suffocating kiss.

Even with the mask on, the man could not bring himself to inch closer to Natalie earlier.

But now, he grasped her body tightly and rubbed his face against her skin affectionately. The familiar fragrance of herbs on her body lingered on the tip of his nose. He had utilized every ounce of his willpower to tame down the wild thought of amalgamating her body into his.

Burying his head in her warm and soft neck, Samuel rubbed his face intimately and mumbled in a low and raspy voice, "You're acting too audacious because you know I love you very much. You're making me lose my rationality and succumb to my desires in front of you..."

Natalie chuckled. "So, you finally decide to open up to me? Why did you collude with Luna to put up such a show in front of me? Don't think about lying to me. You should know that I'm not easy to fool. Now that I have my doubts against you, finding the truth will only be a matter of time even if you choose not to say anything."

A scowl appeared on Samuel's face at once.

He assumed that by wearing the silver mask and using the persona of Xander, Natalie would not find out about his identity. Even if she could, that would only happen after a long time. Little did he imagine that he would be exposed so quickly.

So, should I come clean or not?

There was a turmoil of emotions in the depths of his eyes as he pursed his lips together so tightly they turned ashen in color.

Natalie reached out and held Samuel by his chin.

“You...” He stared at her in disbelief.

“Judging from how you’re unwilling to say anything, I’m pretty sure it has got something to do with me.” Sincerity filled Natalie’s gaze. “Why do you not want to tell me? You better not assume that you’re doing me good by doing that, Samuel! We’ve been through thick and thin all this while. Even though I’m not powerful enough to ensure that all plans are infallible, I’m not a weakling who needs someone to take care of me. Tell me the truth. I will stay by your side no matter what, okay?”

Since Samuel was unwilling to reveal the truth to her, Natalie decided to pull out her trump card.

In the end, in the dark eyes of Samuel, the emotions he pent up within him condensed into rays of glint.

I guess the odds of me winning against Natalie are too low.

Knowing that he could not possibly wrestle against her insistence, Samuel asked, “Have I never told you the reason why I had asked to be Master’s disciple?”

“No.” Natalie shook her head.

“You became Master’s disciple to improve your medical skills so that you can save lives and heal the wounded. As for me, it’s because Grandpa wants to be in a favorable position before requesting Master to get my health back in shape.”

“What?” Natalie seemed a little overwhelmed.

Lowering his gaze, Samuel continued, “Silas is my uncle, and so is Stanley. Back then, Uncle Stanley drugged me with a potent poison while the Bowers family’s internal strife got intense. When Grandpa took me to Master, I was on the brink of death...” It seemed a little difficult for the man to continue speaking. “Master managed to suppress the toxins in my body with medicine and saved my life. However, he only managed to extend my life by three years. Knowing that the Garcia family has stronger expertise in expelling poison, Master handed my case over to Luna’s grandpa. Taking pity on me, Old Mr. Garcia put in a lot of effort and used numerous expensive and precious medicinal herbs to suppress the toxins in my body to ensure that I could live a longer life.”

Following that was a moment of dead silence.

The emotions glinting in that pair of beautiful almond-shaped eyes faded into nothing.

Samuel did not continue with the rest of his sentence. Yet, a sudden revelation dawned upon the lady who was well proficient in the area of medicine.

“Could it possibly have something to do with the aging drug?” A chilly aura emanated from Natalie’s body as she probed. “The toxicity in your body should’ve long achieved a balance. Is it because of a trigger that is causing the toxins in your body to act up earlier than expected?”

A Cue for Love Chapter 999

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 999

Chapter 999 Stay With You Through Thick And Thin

Samuel narrowed his eyes and looked at her. She’s indeed a smart and sly woman. She would have figured it out had I given her more information.

Instead of asking him questions, Natalie grabbed his wrist and read his pulse.

Not only did Samuel have an irregular pulse, but it was also inconsistent. She had no idea what was wrong with the bizarre pulse pattern.

Natalie shuddered, but she refused to take her hand off his wrist. She gave him a dazed look of bewilderment. “Is this why you hid the truth from me?”

“The aging drug has triggered the toxins in your body. You’re now suffering because of me!” Natalie’s eyes turned red.

Natalie put on a tough front by letting out a cursory laugh, but tears welled up in her eyes.

Her teardrops started rolling down her cheeks uncontrollably like pearls falling from a broken necklace. “So everything you did is for me.”

Natalie believed Samuel had his own reason for doing things in a certain way, but she did not expect him to put his life in danger for her. She bit her lips and felt sorry for the man. Why did you hide this from me? You silly man!

“Don’t cry.” Samuel lifted his hands and wiped the tears off her cheeks with his slender fingers.

“The toxins are so powerful that even the master couldn’t purge them out of your body. You knew that all along, yet you refused to tell me.” Natalie shot daggers at Samuel with her teary eyes. “Why didn’t you tell me? How could you... how could you hide it from me?”

“Nat.” Samuel pressed his lips and said gradually, “There’s nothing you could do even if I told you about my situation. I hid it from you because I didn’t want you to blame yourself. I just want to spare you the misery.”

“I didn’t need you to do that for me. I’m capable of handling my feelings.” Natalie tilted her head and looked at him. She continued questioning him in between sobs, “Had I not pulled this dirty trick on you, do you plan on keeping this a secret from me and the kids to the day you die?”

“I haven’t given up on the treatment,” Samuel said casually, “But if I fail to stop the toxins from spreading and pass away within these six months, Luna will announce to the public that I’d died in a traffic accident.”

“Samuel Bowers!” Natalie exploded with rage. She clenched her fists and punched the man in his chest repeatedly.

“What do you take me for? Huh?” Once again, she burst into tears. “Am I your business partner? Do you think I’m just a plaything that can keep you company when you need me? Don’t you care about my feelings?”

The blazing afternoon sun beamed through the window and hurt her eyes. “Or do you think I won’t stay with you through thick and thin?”

“Nope.” Samuel shook his head and pressed his voice. “I’ve never thought of you that way. And I care about your feelings. It’s just that I can deal with this on my own. There’s no point for you to suffer with me!”

Natalie looked between Samuel’s brows. She was both mad and terrified.

She was mad that Samuel made that decision without consulting her.

But at the same time, she was also afraid she might lose him in six months.

Natalie hopped down from the desk, grabbed Samuel’s hands, and said in a steady voice, “I want you to come with me to a place right now.”

“To where?” Samuel asked while knitting his brows.

Words caught in Natalie's throat as she was still in a state of great agitation. She glared at him and said, "Don't ask. Just come with me. I won't do bad things to you, don't worry."

Natalie took off her surgical gown and left the hospital with Samuel.

Soon, Natalie and Samuel arrived at the city hall.

Samuel looked at the city hall signboard and pulled his hand away from Natalie. He looked at her and asked, "What do you want to do?"

A Cue for Love Chapter 1000

A Cue for Love (Natalie and Samuel)

Chapter 1000

Chapter 1000 Do You Still Want To Turn Me Down

"To register our marriage, of course," Natalie said in a hoarse voice while biting her lips. She steadied herself and continued, "I finally know Justin didn't lie to me. And I also know you've decorated the greenhouse for me, so I'll take that as a marriage proposal. So now we're just a step away from becoming husband and wife."

Samuel's forehead creased even deeper upon hearing Natalie's words.

"I'm not doing this," Samuel rejected her proposal indifferently.

"Why not?" Natalie lowered her eyes and refused to give in. "You have sacrificed your life to save me. I should have married you a long time ago. I don't know much about the toxins in your body, and I'm not sure what I can do to get rid of them."

"I have no idea how much time we have left, and I don't want to waste even one second of it. You're stuck with me, and I'll be your Mrs. Bowers for the rest of your life!" Natalie meant every word she said.

She did not know what the future would be like, but she did not want to live in regret.

Samuel looked at Natalie with a complicated expression and said icily, "Stop being so stubborn. Have you ever thought of the future?"

“The future? Nobody knows what the future holds.” Natalie refused to budge. “I don’t know what the future will be like, but I want to cherish the time I have with you. I’ll not let you go!”

Natalie’s eyes turned red. Though she was smiling, tears still streamed down her cheeks.

The two of them were still standing outside the city hall.

Samuel frowned with a deadpan expression, whereas Natalie’s face was tear-streaked. The city hall’s employees and couples could not help but glance at them when they walked in and out of the building.

“How could the man stand there and watch the girl cry? He should be consoling that poor girl!”

“I hope that handsome man is not a jerk. Did he chicken out? But they’re already here at the city hall!”

“Oh, dear. I feel sorry for the girl...”

Samuel and Natalie heard all the scathing remarks the crowd made.

Samuel clenched his fists but still had that indifferent look on his face.

Natalie had made up her mind. We must register our marriage today, and I’ll not take no for an answer.

Marrying Samuel was the only way to keep him by her side. Otherwise, he might still run away from me.

Natalie bit her lips hard. She started tearing up and voiced her grievance, “You’re the father to my four kids. How could you not think of their future? I don’t mind people gossiping about me behind my back, but what if they look down on the kids?”

All the passersby started gasping in sheer disbelief upon hearing that. What? Unbelievable!

They were all surprised to learn that the young couple had four children together! How did they do it?

Everyone turned their attention to Natalie.

A sharp glint flashed across Samuel’s eyes, and he gave all the passersby a side-eye. Those people might not have any bad intentions, but he did not like the way they looked at her.

Natalie blinked to get rid of the tears dangling on her eyelashes. She walked up to Samuel, held his hands, and said vulnerably, "I've swallowed my pride and begged you to marry me. Are you trying to make a laughing stock? I have dignity too!"

"You think what you did was for my own good. Yes, I understand where you're coming from, but I want to marry you. I want to be your one and only wife!" she added.

Samuel's heart skipped a beat when he heard that.

"Do you still have the heart to turn me down?"