

Love Has its Will by Selena Lewis Chapter 457 Three days later

Savanna woke up, and the first thing she saw was the white ceiling

“Where am I? What’s wrong with me?”

Savanna asked in her gravelly voice. When she tried to move, she felt pain all over her body.

Although Savanna only managed to make the slightest moves, Brandon still woke up.

“Savanna, you’re awake?”

Brandon had been waiting beside Savanna’s bed all these days. He barely slept. The rim of his eye got redder, and his eyes were bloodshot.

Brandon’s eyes were filled with surprise and happiness when he saw Savanna was awake.

“I’m calling the doctors.”

Savanna felt a burst of tenderness from the bottom of her heart watching Brandon get busy and nervous for her.

After crossing through the gate of death and life, Savanna thought she became more tolerant and forgiving.

Some things irreconcilable for her became trivial matters.

“How long have I been unconscious?”

“Including the accident, four days.”

Brandon stuffed the woman’s weak and boneless hand into his palm and held it like a treasure.

“Sorry for making you worry.”

“I’m fine as long as you wake up.” Brandon lowered his head and kissed her hand.

“Where is Roya?” Savanna asked worriedly.

“Home. With Lizeth.”

At that moment, a group of doctors flooded

The doctors examined Savanna carefully, making sure Savanna didn’t have a concussion or other hidden injuries. They told Brandon Savanna had only some external injuries and needed more time to rest for healing.

Brandon heaved a sigh of relief. After sending the doctor away, he sat back beside the bed.

“The driver is still in a coma. When he wakes up, I will make him pay.”

Savanna immediately became nervous when

Brandon mentioned the accident and asked,

“Is Roya alright?”

She remembered when the accident happened, she tried to protect her daughter subconsciously.

However, Savanna was still worried because her injury was severe.

“You protect Roya very well. She was fine. I failed to look after you well. Otherwise, you will not be hurt.”

Self-blame and love shone brightly in Brandon’s bloodshot eyes.

“It’s alright that the child is fine.” Savanna patted the bed next to her and continued, “Lie down and sleep for a while. You seem to have not rested well these days.”

Brandon lay down as Savanna asked. Fortunately, the bed in the VIP ward was big enough for the two people.

Surrounded by Savanna’s scent, Brandon finally managed to sleep soundly.

When he woke up, Brandon called Jim to send Roya to the hospital.

Savanna was so eager to see her daughter. When she saw Roya, Savanna felt even the pain in her injured arm became mild.

She thought Roya’s smile was even more useful than the painkillers.

After about a week, Savanna was almost fully recovered. After getting the doctor’s permission, Savanna couldn’t wait any longer to leave the hospital.

Savanna was so eager to leave the hospital, mainly because she was worried the hospital was filled with every kind of germs that would harm Roya if she came often.

“Let’s go! It’s the day for my wife to go home!”

Brandon carried Roya with one arm and walked in front of Savanna.

Savanna followed Brandon and walked slowly. Holding her broken hand, Savanna looked at the back of the father and the daughter, smiling.

The happiness was late for two months, but fortunately, all the scattered people were reuniting together.

When they arrived home, Savanna felt everything was still so familiar.

The things she bought before he got pregnant were there.

And the baby carriage and the baby bed were wiped so clean and glossy.

“Honey, we will go to Love Wings first for Tye. The four of us will live a happy life.”

“Alright.” Savanna leaned her head against

Brandon's chest.

Surrounded by the familiar cool pine fragrance and Brandon's body temperature, Savanna felt tearful for happiness.

Good things came one after the other.

Soon the hospital called and said the perpetrator woke up.

Brandon and Savanna drove to the hospital eagerly.

At the same time, Flora received the same message.

She became panicked and smashed everything within her reach like a mad woman.

According to the information she got, the driver was seriously injured and could not wake up at all.

Why?

Is that even God chooses to help Savanna the slut?

After losing her temper, Flora put on her sunglasses and hat and rushed to the hospital in disguise.

Brandon drove so fast and they arrived at the ward soon.

In the enclosed room, there was the choking smell of disinfectant.

The perpetrator did wake up, but his injuries were too severe, only his eyes and fingers could move.

With a respiratory mask covering his mouth, he could not say a word.

The police had already asked the perpetrator some questions.

They failed to get much useful information, except that this person got 75 thousand dollars or more in cash.

"Mr. Cassel, you may go home first. We will continue to investigate. If there is any news, we will inform you immediately."

Having already guessed this kind of ending,

Savanna did not feel much disappointment.

It was just like every time before, Savanna had been used to this.

After coming out of the hospital, the two drove to Love Wings for Tye.

When their car drove past an intersection, a black Cayenne came from the opposite side.

The two cars met and drove in opposite directions. The Cayenne turned not far away, drove to the hospital, and stopped at the parking lot.

A woman in a black dress, sunglasses, and a mask came down from the Cayenne.

She had disguised herself and could not see her face clearly. But she still had a notable feature: she was limping when she walked.

The woman looked around to make sure no one saw her and quickly entered the elevator.

The elevator stopped on the 18th floor. The woman walked out and found her aim at once: the ward guarded by police officers.

A moment later, a nurse pushing a small medicine cart came to the ward that the police were guarding.

“Excuse me, please open the door. I need to change the IV drip for the patient.”

The police guarding the door stepped aside, and the little nurse pounded her legs as she walked.

“Ouch, sitting for too long a time. My foot got cramps, and I even limped.”

Savanna arrived at Love Wings Child Learning Institute when Flora was at the door of the ward.

When Tye heard that his mother was coming to pick him up, he waited at the gate early.

As soon as the car stopped, he happily ran towards the front passenger seat.

“Mom!” The mother and son hugged each other.

“Be careful of your mother’s arm. Don’t press it.” Brandon was worried about his wife and nagged.

Tye had already known about his mother’s accident and shed for it.

Fortunately, Savanna’s injury was not very serious, and she managed to leave the hospital soon.

“Mom, your hand is so injured. Does it hurt?” Tye asked worriedly.

Savanna shook her head, “I will cry if you feel pain. Am I crying now?”

“No, you are not.” The little guy answered truthfully.

Savanna smiled and said, “So you don’t have to worry about me. It doesn’t hurt.”

When Tye heard this, he immediately became happy and jumped into the car, shouting that he wanted to go home to see his sister.

The family of three quickly returned home, and just as they opened the door, a tempting fragrance of food spread out.

Wiping her hands, Lizeth walked out of the kitchen and said, “Dinner is just ready. You must enjoy them now. Roya is sleeping upstairs. I think she will wake up when you finish dining.”

Lizeth was sharp on time. Tye was the last one finishing eating, and just as he put down his fork, Roya’s crying came from upstairs.

“Roya wakes up. I carried her down,” said Lizeth.

Savanna stood up and said, “Let me do it.”

“Can you do it with just one hand?” Brandon asked.

Savanna smiled and said coquettishly,

“Don’t I still have you?”

“I’ll go up with you.

Brandon was about to go upstairs when Brandon’s phone on the table rang.

Brandon looked and said, “It’s from the police.”
