

A Cue for Love Chapter 1133

Chapter 1133 New Business Collaboration

Natalie was momentarily stunned when she heard that. She had assumed that Helma was there either to stir up trouble or complain, but to her surprise, the woman was there to talk business. “Are you scared?” Helma sneered.

“Nope.” Natalie tightened her grip around her coffee mug and said calmly, “Dream Corporation will never reject any profitable business opportunities. Besides, fear is not an emotion I would usually feel...”

Helma met Natalie’s gaze and replied, “I heard that Dream Jewelry has been procuring raw materials from the Stone family all along. I have ways to obtain raw materials that are of better quality than what Amos has. If we collaborate, you would no longer have to submit to the Stone family’s every whim.”

“Ms. Helma, that sounds like a good deal for Dream Corporation...” Natalie still had doubts about Helma’s intentions. “But what would you get out of it? It seems like Dream Corporation will benefit more from this than the Leitz family will.”

Helma, who had just lifted her cup to take a sip of coffee, froze. Natalie’s response was exactly as she had expected.

Natalie was not a gullible person, and she would not easily believe anything that seemed too good to be true.

However, Helma was already prepared for that. With a smile on her face, she said, “Natalie, I was indeed pretty upset about what happened at the banquet as you had made me look like a fool. Nevertheless, what happened has already happened. There’s no going back for Prince Jonathan and me. Whether I want it or not, moving on is my only choice. Other than being related to the royal family, our Leitz family has been exploring some business opportunities. The Stone family amassed their fortune by mining rough stones, and our family is keen on having a slice of the same pie. It’s extremely difficult for ordinary businesses to obtain mining rights, but that isn’t the case for the Leitz family. In fact, we have already obtained the rights. All we need now is an anchor client who can supply us with a steady stream of business, and Dream Jewelry was the first company that came to my mind.”

Natalie blinked a few times while she scrutinized Helma’s expression.

At the same time, Helma was also sizing her up.

Finally, Natalie extended her hand and said graciously, “Ms. Helma, I hope we’ll have a fruitful collaboration.”

“I’m looking forward to that.”

After Helma left, Natalie went to look for Yandel.

“Yandel, did Helma create any trouble for you when I was not around?” Natalie knew Yandel well. Yandel understood that Natalie had been focusing on her recovery, and he wanted her to enjoy her vacation time with Samuel. As such, even if he was facing pressure at work, it was unlikely that he would let her know.

Yandel shook his head and replied, “I’m fine. I have already become desensitized to certain things after so long.”

“Thank you, Yandel.”

“Boss, you’re being too polite toward me again!” Yandel said, frowning. “I’m just doing what I’m supposed to do. If you continue acting this way, I will get angry!”

Natalie and Yandel had gone through a lot together. After the man’s reminder, Natalie stopped being so sentimental.

After that, Natalie told Yandel about their new business collaboration with Helma.

Yandel said, “Boss, the Leitz family and you are practically enemies. Don’t you think this business opportunity could be a trap?”

“Helma’s proposal did make sense. On the surface, there seem to be no issues.” Natalie rested her chin on one hand and continued, “She gave us a good deal. What they can offer is indeed much better than what we are getting from the Stone family right now. If we reject them without a good reason, others who get to know about it will think that Dream is putting on airs. Besides, we might also end up offending our current business partners who are on good terms with the Leitz family.”

“Boss, I still think that Helma wouldn’t be so kind to us,” Yandel said hesitantly.

“Well, if we reject her this time, she will just try again,” Natalie replied. “Yandel, we can take this opportunity to see what they are up to. If it is really a trap, even if we had turned her down, the Leitz family would still think of other ways to set me up.”

A Cue for Love Chapter 1134

Chapter 1134 Keep Staring

Yandel felt a lot calmer upon hearing what Natalie said. “Have you guessed it as well, Boss?” Yandel asked. “It’s not that. I just feel that we should let some things go with the flow. Regardless of whether it would turn out good or bad, we’ll only find out as we go forward.” Natalie frowned. “Of course, your reminder makes sense. We don’t know the exact reasons Helma looked for us for a collaboration. We should be cautious from now on.”

“Okay! Since you’ve already made your decision, I’ll do everything you tell me to, Boss!” Yandel answered, beating his chest. “Okay.” Natalie stayed back to continue working.

She had full confidence in Yandel’s loyalty. However, during the time she had stayed home to recuperate, she had burdened Yandel and Lia with too much work. She planned to pick up where she left off with Dream.

Natalie had so much to deal with that she ended up staying in the office until eleven at night. Upon finishing the last document she was working on, she realized it was already dark outside. It’s already so late? I forgot to inform the others at home!

Natalie got up from her chair and picked up her phone to ring Samuel. The moment she did that, the doorbell at her office rang. What’s going on?

Without hanging up the phone, Natalie immediately went to open the door, only to see Samuel leaning against the wall outside her office. His gaze was as alluring as ever.

Natalie’s eyes lit up slightly when she asked, “W-What are you doing here?”

Samuel smoothed her hair and answered, “I was waiting for you to come home, but I ran out of patience, so I came here to wait for you. Fortunately, you’re still here!”

Natalie smiled gleefully when she heard that. “Why didn’t you tell me you were here? Why did you wait outside? Aren’t you bored?”

“A little…” Samuel reached out to pull Natalie in. While caressing her back, he continued in his hoarse voice, “But I forgot all about it the moment I saw you.”

What… He’s such a flirt! Natalie’s heart was filled with emotions. She lifted her head to meet his gaze and said, “What did you have for dinner? Why are your words so sweet?” She smiled and grabbed his collar to pull him closer.

Samuel stared into her eyes and uttered in his seductive voice, “Should I have a taste of you? That way, I might sound even sweeter.”

“You—”

Before Natalie could finish her sentence, Samuel had already leaned in to kiss her on her lips. Of course, the kiss started out light, but as they went on, the kiss became a passionate one.

Since it was late at night, the office was rather dark.

With certain senses weakened, physical stimulation and the sense of pleasure were heightened.

At that moment, heavy breathing sounds and the sounds of their tongues interlocking filled the room.

The sounds were continuous, and the ambiguous atmosphere could easily make one blush.

Suddenly, someone said, "Samuel, are you really not going to tell Boss you're here? She's a busy woman, you know? If you don't tell her, s-she..."

Yandel was there to urge Samuel to let Natalie know he had been waiting for her. However, he ran into Samuel pressing Natalie up against the wall and kissing her passionately.

Yandel was utterly stunned. He was so stupefied that he froze on the spot and kept stuttering.

Natalie was disheartened when she saw Yandel staring at her. Yandel is my subordinate, and this is an office! How could I let him see such an embarrassing scene? What should I do?

Samuel quickly pulled Natalie's limp body inward and stood in front of her. While using his own body to shield her from Yandel's gaze, he growled, "Yandel! Are you going to just keep staring?"

A Cue for Love Chapter 1135

Chapter 1135 Blissful

Yandel finally regained his senses and lowered his head. "I saw nothing! Carry on! Carry on!" He turned around and left in a hurry. No! There goes Yandel's impression of me! Natalie was still holding Samuel's arm when she glared at him. "Samuel, I want to die!"

Samuel held her chin and scolded, "Die? Don't you dare say such nonsense again! You're now my wife. There's nothing wrong with kissing you."

His gaze was solemn and cold. When Natalie saw that, she realized how angry Samuel was. "I was just expressing my feelings!"

"Still! You can't say that word!" Samuel said domineeringly. "Isn't that inevitable for everyone? It's just—" Samuel put his hand over her mouth to stop her from talking. "No!"

Right then, Natalie could feel how much Samuel cared about her. I never knew Samuel doesn't take jokes like this. Although I wasn't wrong when I said it was an inevitable end for everyone, Samuel loves me so much that he doesn't even allow me to mention death out loud.

"Mmph! Your h-hand is covering my mouth... I-I can't talk..."

"Are you still going to say that word?" It was rare to see Samuel being so harsh with Natalie. "No... No..." Natalie shook her head.

Only then did Samuel retract his hand. He held her hand gently and said, "Come. Let's go home." Samuel's palm had calluses, but she felt an inexplicable sense of peace when she held his hand.

Their fingers intertwined, and Natalie's heart was filled with joy. When you meet the right person, even the most insignificant gestures can be so blissful.

Meanwhile, at the Leitz residence, Helma was removing her earrings. Heidi approached Helma and asked, "Helma, did that b*tch, Natalie, take the bait?"

"Yes." Helma maintained a straight face. "However, she's an extraordinary woman. I've already heard about what she did in Chanaea before she came to Loang. She established Dream Corporation and reclaimed her father's company effortlessly. After that, she forced her biological father, stepmother, biological sister, and stepsister to their graves. Although she has blood on her hands, she somehow escaped all sorts of punishment!"

Heidi knew Natalie was definitely not someone to be trifled with. However, she still couldn't help but feel flustered when she heard what Helma said. Is Natalie really so capable?

"Helma, should we expose the information that you've discovered?" Heidi asked tentatively. "Should we get netizens and ghostwriters to go after her?" "That's so lame."

"Huh?" Helma rolled her eyes at Heidi and said, "Do you think Natalie would be bothered by having a bad reputation? Besides, if you employ ghostwriters, will you be able to not let Natalie catch you? Why should we go through so much trouble to only hurt her a little? Don't you find that lame?"

Heidi had nothing to defend herself with. "Helma, that b*tch embarrassed you at the banquet and humiliated the Leitz family. I can't take it!" Heidi grumbled with a pout.

"What's the hurry?" Helma kept her earrings in her jewelry box and drawled, "Her time is running out, so what's the point in messing around? We should utterly destroy her with one move! I'll make sure not even Bastien can save her for what she has done!"

