

Chapter 1210 A Gift From Vera

While Laney was busy with the fruits, Janet pulled Ian to a corner and reminded him, "Pay more attention to the parcels sent to Laney. I'm afraid something awful will come with her new parcels." Janet made sure to keep her voice quiet.

Janet was almost certain that Kailee picked the day Laney gave birth to her baby to set up a trap. It wasn't a mere coincidence that she and Garrett were at the same hotel at the same time.

Also, it was likely Kailee left some sort of evidence of that day. Photos and recordings, perhaps. Something to provoke Laney.

Ian nodded, his expression turning serious. "Don't worry. I'll pay attention to it."

At this time, a nurse came in to change Laney's dressing. Janet watched in silence, then went to pour a glass of water for Laney.

dressing. Janet watched in silence, then went to pour a glass of water for Laney.

Just then, Janet caught a glimpse of a beautifully packaged box under the nurse's trolley. Red lights flashed in her mind. "What's that? Is it also for Laney?"

"Yes, this is a gift from Mrs. Harding."

The nurse took out the box from the trolley and was about to hand it to Laney, but Ian stopped her and took it instead.

"Let me see it first."

After Janet's advice, Ian was on high alert.

He was vigilant toward everything that came from the outside, fearing something in it would put Laney in danger.

On top of feeling a little surprised, Laney's interest was piqued as well. "A gift from Mrs. Harding?"

Since giving birth, she avoided any contact with the Harding family. She wasn't expecting Vera would take the initiative to send her something. The package seemed to be a gift, which was surprising.

Janet stared at the parcel with a frown. Her instincts told her something was off with it.

It was hard to believe Vera would be so kind as to prepare a gift for Laney.

Once Laney's dressing was changed, the nurse pushed the trolley out. As soon as the door closed, Laney urged Ian to open the package, her curiosity winning over her.

Ian glanced at Janet who nodded slightly. With her permission, he opened the package just like Laney ordered.

To everyone's surprise, there was a letter and a photo album in it.

Janet's heart skipped a beat, her expression shifting instantly. Her eyes fixed on Ian as he opened the album, afraid that it would have obscene photos from Kailee.

It was not until she made sure there were only some pictures of Garrett when he was a child that she was able to heave a sigh of relief.

Laney opened the envelope. She was more surprised to find it was a handwritten letter from Vera.

Vera seemed sincere in the letter when she mentioned how the whole house was lackluster during Garrett's absence.

She also expressed how much she missed their newly born granddaughter but would not force Laney if she didn't want to go back. They did hope that once she had recovered, she could take the baby back so they could see her.

Laney was touched by reading Vera's sincere words.

She flipped through the album, looking at Garrett's childhood photos. The cute little boy in the pictures amused her. "Look at how dull Garrett was when he was a child."

"Yeah, I wouldn't have thought he was like this before." Despite Janet's initial worry about the content of the photo album, she still smiled at Laney.

The two of them looked at the photos. There were only Garrett's childhood photos in the album. It should have nothing to do with Kailee, so Janet gradually put her guard down.

After taking the medicine, Laney felt a little sleepy. She decided to continue looking through the album after she woke up so she put it down on the bedside table.

When Janet and Ian left the ward, they were

"Mrs. Larson, bad news! Mr. Larson and Garrett are fighting!"
