

THE VIRGIN'S REVENGE

Chapter 15 Her screams were loud enough to wake up the entire neighbourhood.

Her screams were loud enough to wake up the entire neighbourhood.

Stuart rushed in to check up on her only to find Bethany hugging her feet tightly with her head buried in her thighs.

Her black long hair was wet from all the sweat, her deep blue eyes were blood shot and swollen.

"Princess, calm down everything's going to be fine dad's right by your side okay," he spoke softly gently rubbing her back.

Bethany flinched at the feel of his touch so she pushed him wildly, "Don't come near.....please don't hurt me."

"No sweetie i would never hurt you look it's me.....it's dad," he said frantically.

She slowly raised up her head coming back to realization "dad.....oh dad...,she rushed over to him hugging him like her life depended on it just like the driftwood in the sea.

"Please..... don't let them..... hurt me dad," she said in between sob's.

Stuart felt a twinge of pain seeing his daughter petrified.

Betina on the other hand never left her room amidst all the screams.

With every scream she grimaced harder, that night Stuart stayed with Bethany and it soon became a routine.

He would stay by her side coaxing her and putting her back to sleep whenever she would've episodes of nightmares.

One morning, when he got out of bed to prepare breakfast, he over heard his wife speak to someone anonymous on the phone.

"Yes i can reassure you she's ready, today would be the best day for the two to finally meet up.....absolutely let's make it 2 in the afternoon then," she hung up the phone with so much excitement.

Betina was surprised to see the mayor's call this early in the morning.

Her heart beat erratically thinking he was calling to cancel the engagement but to her surprise it was still on.

She had to think fast, Bethany had to marry Calvin before the news of her assault gets to them.

Finally something good was happening following all the recent jinx, she thought to herself.

Images of her living in luxury as the in-law to the Valdez brought a smile across her face, she had to fix things up with Bethany.

Of course out of her own interests.

Poor Bethany had no clue of what she had planned.

Calvin Valdez was the son to Las'Ganas' mayor he gained interest in Bethany on the night of the annual grand town festival.

So when he informed his dad that Bethany was the girl he desired to marry, the mayor approached Betina.

Betina agreed to the deal because to her it was a straight passage out of all the poverty she faced.

"Who were you talking to?" Stuart asked.

His question brought her back to reality, "Stuart what are you doing up this early," she replied trying to change the topic.

Stuart wasn't up early as he always woke up at this same time everyday.

Betina knew he never acknowledged her plan of marrying Bethany off to the Valdez family and that was one of the reason's they were distant from each other.

But looking back she knew it was pointless to hide the truth so she told it to him straight "the mayor and he will be coming with Calvin later in the afternoon so i need you to speak with Bethany i need her to be more talkative and vibrant she's been so low on words lately, i dont want the mayor to think we are giving his son a mute for a wife."
