

THE VIRGIN'S REVENGE

Chapter 18 Feelings of guilt stormed her mind

Larissa had no clue about the deplorable event that befell her friend, feelings of guilt stormed her mind.

She tried to speak but all the words seemed caged in her vocal code.

"Wow mom it's so easy for you to abandon me you know what I'm glad the marriage alliance didn't work out, and i won't ask you what prompted you into selling me off because it all goes back to the money, i just hope you live a better life while I'm gone."

"No one's leaving the house okay i understand the emotional turmoil but we just need to calm down."

"No dad if mom can't stand my presence i will leave may be that will finally bring her some tranquility."

"Bethany don't leave," little Lucian cried out.

She crouched to his level, cupped his cheeks and said "be a good boy okay remember i love you so much," she hugged him tears coursing down her cheeks.

Bethany stormed out of the house with Larissa in her grip, they got in the car and drove to their sanctuary; the beach.

Bethany ran towards the sea and screamed at the top of her voice.

Larissa joined her and the both of them screamed till they had enough.

"I'm sorry all this wouldn't have happened if....

"Shh, Bethany placed her fingers on her lips to stop the self blame, don't blame yourself besides that won't change anything."

The two spent more time at the beach till it got late and they returned home.

All the crying exhausted them, so Larissa went straight to bed.

In the cold night, the moon shone so brightly Bethany who had been restless awoke and headed towards the window.

The moonlight penetrated through the curtains revealing an emotionless face but deep down her blue oceanic eyes was a glint of sorrow and rage.

Her mind flashed back to the awful night and she clenched her fists holding the curtains so tightly.

A tear rolled down her glossy cheek and she said "i promise to the heavens I'll make each one of you pay and feel the pain ten times more than what you made me go through," she wiped the tears with the back of her hands.

That night Bethany made up her mind to leave Las'Ganas.

As the days got by Lucian would often times drop by to see Bethany.

Stuart was devastated to see his family crush down, Betina on the other hand showed no remorse for throwing her daughter out in the streets.

Bethany decided to tell Larissa of her plans but she wanted to make their last day together memorable.

The next day Larissa awoke to the aroma of food, she got out of bed only to find Bethany dressed like the classy chef's in the movies.

"Bestie what's all this for don't tell me

"No silly since when do we need special occasions in order to celebrate."

"Mmmh okay so all this is for nothing?"

"I suppose anyway grab a plate and dig in,

Larissa grabbed a burger and ate it savagely which made Bethany to laugh out loud.

"Would you go slow."
