I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2257

Thor, at the other table, noticed this.

As someone who followed David, he could not sit idly by.

Even if David were not bothered by those irrelevant people because of his skills, Thor should do what he had to do.

Therefore, he got up and walked over.

He said courteously, "Sirs, Master doesn't like too much noise. Plus, we're just passing by and well leave tomorrow. Please don't disturb us, thank you!"

Brutus and the others were not happy.

The smile on their faces gradually disappeared as well.

A servant was speaking to them? Who gave him the right to do so?

"Get lost! I'm speaking to your master. Who do you think you are? You're just a dog! What qualifications do you have to interrupt us? Do you believe that I'll chop off your damn tongue so that you'll never speak again?" Brutus yelled.

Thor was not mad either.

He did not have any background in the real world.

When he got to The Spirit Cage, he had nothing.

Every day, he would go to various cities. He had been insulted and looked down upon. Being mocked and teased was normal to him.

Then, after some accumulation, he gained a foothold in Sole and became a slightly popular and wealthy businessman.

Thor's experiences over the years taught him that money was nothing.

He had to have background and strength. Otherwise, the money he made would only go to others if he was not careful.

When he met David, Thor was willing to give up his year of accumulation to follow David without hesitation and take him as his master.

It was because he hoped to rely on David.

If not, that was about the furthest he could go.

If this continued, the other forces might start eyeing him.

“Sir...”

Thor wanted to say something but was interrupted by David.

“Mr. Rivers, you should leave. I’ll handle this.”

David took Thor in so that Thor could contact the local merchants to buy treasures, not suffer grievances.

He had already been polite to the men. If they still refused to leave, then they should not blame him for not showing them respect and starting trouble.

‘Yes, Master.’

After Thor said that, he went back to his seat.

He did everything he could and he could not handle the local tyrants here anyway.

Their target was clearly the Elf women that David spent loads of money to buy.

“Guys, we’ll only be here for one night and we don’t want any connection with you. Please leave before I get angry,” David said flatly.

‘Wow. Kid, we’re giving you respect, so you should know what’s good for you! Do you know where you are? Do you know who we are? How dare you speak to us this way. I think you don’t want to leave!’ Brutus sneered.

The scene here attracted the attention of the other customers on the second floor.

However, after they saw Brutus, they only lowered their heads quietly and continued eating.

They knew they could not afford to offend Brutus and his gang.

At the same time, they were also mourning for David and his team.

If they did not fulfill the request of these hedonists, they would not be able to leave safely.

“I don’t care who you are. I’ll say it again. Leave my sight and stop disturbing my meal,” David repeated.

“Kid, listen, you’re in trouble. It’s useless even if you kneel and kowtow to apologize to us now. I need you to know the consequences of offending people you can’t afford to offend.”

“Brutus, you can’t say that. If that kid is willing to borrow those beauties for us to enjoy, then we can still let him go. It’s easier to solve an argument than to start one. Why should we use violence on things we can solve peacefully? Don’t you think so, bro?”

As the two talked, one of them lifted his hand to touch the face of the Elf woman closest to them.
