"Hmph..." Baron snorted coldly and stood up, saying indifferently, "I have no interest in your woman! I'm only interested in the mastermind behind the destruction of the Dragon's Dungeon!"

As he said those words, he stared fixedly at Andrius' eyes, hoping to find some clue.

Unfortunately, he could not detect any trace of p

"The Dragon's Dungeon was destroyed?" Andrius raised his brows slightly and said in surprise, "It's right under the emperor's feet, and you, a top-tier expert, are guarding it. Who would have the guts to do such a thing?"

Those words were like a resounding slap smacking Baron's face, especially since they came from the mouth of the prime suspect...

It was simply ironic!

However, Andrius did not reveal anything in his words or actions, so Baron had no leverage. Even if he felt displeased deep down, he could only swallow this bitterness.

He could not bear to continue staying here anymore and ordered his soldiers, "Stand down."

He was conceding..

The soldiers did as they were told.

Then, Baron prepared to leave.

“Wait.” Andrius’ calm yet intimidating voice rang out, “Baron Von Doom, I didn’t say you could leave.”

A flash of anger crossed Baron’s face. He turned to look at Andrius, his eyes nearly bulging out. “What else do you want?”

Baron’s voice was strained as he spoke his words through gritted teeth. “Don’t push your luck, Andrius Moonshade!”

“Apologize.”

Andrius remained calm in the

However, Baron did not thin

that it was true calmness.

Andrius Moonshade...

The Wolf King from the west had always been a provoked.

Baron's expression changed again.

Then, he lost all dignity to stay and led his soldiers to leave Calmert Estate in embarrassment. Just as he stepped out of the door, Emmy responded cheerfully, "It's okay!"

Baron stumbled and almost spat out blood. Then, he quickly left.

"Mister, you were so cool just now!"

Emmy jumped for joy, her gem-like eyes reflecting Andrius' figure, shining brightly at this moment.

Andrius only smiled. He naturally would not tell Emmy just how dangerous the situation had been.

If he had arrived any later, not only would Emmy have been in danger, but the Ghosts outside might all have perished here as well.

Furthermore, the emperor, Baron, and the Second War God would have directly targeted him.

Emmy asked, "Mister, what were you so busy with just now? Did you take care of it?"

"Speaking of which, I want to apologize to you."

Andrius did not look at her and said with some guilt, “I could have rescued you immediately, but I needed an opportunity to evade suspicion, so I went to the Dragon’s Dungeon when you were forced into marriage by Philip.

“I had my subordinate pose as me to create an illusion of me appearing here, but the prison break was successful.”

P

He staged a prison break!

Furthermore, it was at the maximum–security Dragon’s Dungeon!

Emmy could not help but click her tongue. He was amazing!

She grinned and said, “Mister, you don’t need to apologize to me. I felt really happy helping you, especially when you said that I was your woman!”

Andrius instantly did not know how to respond.

How utterly embarrassing!

“Ahem...
