Chapter 841

Then, a woman in nothing but a slip dress appeared on the big screen. Due to the angle of the camera, the woman's face didn't show up on the screen, only parts below her collarbone were visible. Just as everyone wanted to see what the woman looked like, the screen suddenly went black

Colleague A asked in surprise, 'Is that President Hartley's wife?'

Colleague D replied, "Who else could it be if not President Hartley's wife? Would he bring other women home?"

Colleague A said, "His wife really has a great body! No wonder he likes her."

Colleague B said, "Her voice is also very gentle. It's soothing to listen to."

Colleague C said, "He really cares about her, and he turned off the camera before we could see her face."

Upon hearing everyone's comments. Ben slowly said. "You guys are just casually chatting about President Hartley's wife in front of me like I'm not here?"

The colleagues asked, "Aren't you curious about President Hartley's wife?"

Ben answered, "I've met his wife, I don't have anything to be curious about"

The colleagues asked curiously, "You've met his wife? Can you tell us what she looks like? Does her appearance match her voice?"

Ben replied, "If you guys are eager to know, you can ask President Hartley yourselves."

The colleagues said, "You're such a buzzkill!"

If they dared to ask President Hartley, they wouldn't have asked Ben.

Cornelia thought Marcus had gone to work, so she changed into a slip dress. She had walked into the living room when she realized Marcus was still there.

She didn't expect Marcus to be having a video conference with his employees in the living room, not until Marcus closed his tablet Cornelia asked. "Did I interrupt your meeting?"

Marcus replied, "No." He looked up at her; though there was some distance between them, he could already see the marks on her collarbone. Those were bruises he had unintentionally left last night, very noticeable.

He immediately got up, took some anti-swelling ointment from the medicine box, and said, "Come here."

Cornelia obediently walked towards him, and when she got close, he pulled her into his lap. He squeezed the ointment onto her bruises one by one, then rubbed it gently with his fingers. She had many bruises, some even in private areas, but he didn't miss a single one. He applied the medicine attentively and seriously, without any stray thoughts

Watching his gentle actions, Cornelia felt warmth filling her heart, and tears unexpectedly welled up in her eyes.

Marcus noticed her strange reaction, and asked urgently, "Does it still hurt?"

Cornelia shook her head, but she couldn't control her emotions, and buried her head in his chest. Her sudden move made Marcus stop what he was doing. "What's wrong?"

Cornelia said, "I just want you to hold me."

Her initiative, her passion, all made Marcus very happy. He stretched out his arms, holding her soft and sweet body tightly in his embrace, he said, "Does it hurt a lot? I'm sorry, I was naive and rushed this time, but I'll try my best to learn, I won't let you get hurt again."

Why did he always say such awkward things with such seriousness?

Cornelia blushed shyly, her face turning bright red. She even buried her head in his chest, not daring to look up.

Marcus held her tight, smelling her unique scent, "My darling..."

Chapter 842

When the word came out of his mouth, it was like the most beautiful melody in the world, deep and sexy, intoxicating Last night, he called her “darling” in that voice, asking her to call him the same. She was completely mesmerized by him. Whatever he asked her to do, she did.

He said again, “Call me darling one more time!”

Cornelia suddenly jumped out of his arms. “We’re at work you can’t do this”

Marcus, amused by her blushing, said, “Don’t worry, I know Let’s have breakfast”

Marcus started to get her breakfast, but Cornelia stopped him, “You go do your work, I can eat by myself. I don’t want people to say that I’m the kind of woman who ruins men’s careers.”

Marcus chuckled indulgently and had to go back to the office.

Cornelia went back to the room and changed into the pajamas he had prepared for her, then came out to continue eating breakfast.

While eating breakfast, she called Abigail, “Abby, are you back in Riverton yet?”

Abigail answered. “I’m taking the 4 p.m. train and will be there tonight. What’s up? Miss me already after just a few days?”

Cornelia answered, “Of course I miss you”

Abigail asked. “Anything else besides missing me? Spill it!”

Cornelia asked shyly. “Do you know about ovulation?”

Abigail said, “Why are you asking this if Marcus has a problem? Are you really thinking about getting a young lover?”

Cornelia was speechless.

Who told her that Marcus had a problem? Even though she didn't have any previous experience in this area, she knew for sure that Marcus had no problems.

How could Cornelia have misunderstood him so much?

Abigail asked, "What's wrong? You're not talking?"

Cornelia said, "Just tell me, I want to know. As a married woman, it's better to know these things."

Abigail asked, "Which version do you want to hear? Or do you want to hear all versions?"

Cornelia said, "Just tell me all of them."

Abigail started explaining, "According to the encyclopedia, ovulation is the time in the menstrual cycle when an egg and sperm can combine to form a fertilized egg. The egg can be fertilized for two or three days after ovulation, and sperm can survive for three or four days after ejaculation and can enter the egg..."

Cornelia interrupted her, "Put it in plain words!"

Abigail said, "Simply put, if your menstrual cycle starts on the twenty-eighth of every month, then the five days before and four days after the fourteenth of the month are your ovulation period."

Yesterday was just the thirteenth day, which was within the ovulation period that Abigail mentioned. Last night Marcus didn't take any precautions....

Cornelia unconsciously touched her stomach. A new life might have already been growing here. Thinking about this, she was both excited and scared.

Abigail asked, "Cornelia, what are you thinking? Why did you suddenly stop talking?"

Cornelia answered, "You might be meeting my child soon."

Abigail asked, "What do you mean? You didn't really sleep with another man, did you? Cornelia, I was only joking when I told you to find a young guy, you a absolutely can't betray Marcus. If you really fall for another man, you have to divorce President Hartley first."

Cornelia said sweetly, "My relationship with him is very good. I won't divorce him."

Chapter 843

Abigail usually seemed pretty ballsy, and wasn't scared to say anything But when it came to shady business, her moral compass was straighter than anyone else's Right now, she was all worked up worrying about Comella making some dumb decisions Cornelia, if you don't want to divorce, you definitely can't go messing around with other men. If you end up pregnant with some other guy's kid, do you think President Hartley would let that slide?

When Cornelia didn't respond, Abigail continued. "I don't know if he'd let it slide, but if I were him, I definitely couldn't"

Cornelia, "Is that what you really think of me deep down in your heart?"

Abigail, "Of course not, in my eyes, you're just like me. All bark and no bite. We just talk big to entertain ourselves "

Comelia. Yet you still doubt me.

*Abigail,
'It's your own words that got me worried. Just tell me you're pulling my leg"*

Cornelia took a sip of milk, then said slowly, "Why couldn't my child be President Hartley's?"

Abigail. "President Hartley's kid? I thought he had issues, how could he get you pregnant? Did you guys do something special? If that's the case, you'll suffer more than the average pregnant woman

"There was once a beautiful actress who tried every trick in the book to marry into a wealthy family but was kicked out not long after because she couldn't ha ve a baby. These rich women seem to have no freedom, just being baby making machines for wealthy families. I never thought my best friend would face the same issue one day”

Cornelia couldn't stand Abigail's wild imagination. I'll conceive naturally.. the Hartley family doesn't have so many issues.

Abigail, “Huh? But I thought he had issues Is he fine now?”

Cornelia remembered Marcus dominance from the night before. In the end, she not only lost her voice but also passed out, “He's totally fine now”

Abigail screamed in excitement as if she was more thrilled than Cornelia. “God answered my prayers! Didn't waste President Hartley's handsome face and didn't make him less of a man.”

Abigail continued, “Cornelia, now tell me, I want to know if he's different from other men”

Cornelia immediately changed the subject, “You first tell me, how was it going to your boyfriend's house?”

Abigail, “It was great. He's the only child and his parents were really pleased with me. I looked up loads of advice online about first visits to a boyfriend's house. But I was overthinking it. They poured me water, handed me fruit, and didn't let me lift a finger. They even prepared loads of good food for me.

“His mom told me they always wanted a daughter but never had one. If I became part of their family, they'd treat me like their own. And she wasn't all talk, she walked the walk. She's been doing my laundry these past few days.”

Cornelia said, “If they're treating you this well, then I can rest easy.”

Abigail, “Yeah, I was worried that they might not accept me, but everything turned out great”

Cornelia asked a practical question, “What's their financial situation like?”

Chapter 844

Abigail said, "Their financial situation is pretty much similar to mine, maybe even a bit better."

Cornelia asked, "Can you elaborate on that?"

Abigail explained, "Their family lives in Springvale, near Riverton. The GDP of Springvale is a lot higher than Rosenberg's, generally wealthier, and the housing prices are also higher. They own two houses in Springvale, and his parents run a business that brings in quite a bit of dough."

"My boyfriend makes enough money to support his parents, and they've even saved a hefty amount for him. His mom even said that they've already set aside money for our future children, so we don't have to worry about that"

Cornelia said, "Why do I feel like she's trying to sell you a dream?"

Abigail said. "You're having that feeling too?"

Cornelia asked. "You too?"

Abigail said, "I did until last night, but not anymore."

Cornelia asked, "Why is that?"

Abigail explained. "Because last night his mom gave me a bank card with 20 grand as a gift, and told me to buy whatever I fancy."

There was a viewpoint online that said if someone was willing to spend money on you, it meant they really liked you. Abigail didn't originally agree with this viewpoint, she believed whether or not someone was willing to spend money depended first and foremost on their financial ability. What if someone loved you, but were broke?

But after receiving this 20 grand, her perspective changed. She believed that a lot of times, whether or not someone was willing to spend money on you could indeed tell you something

Cornelia nodded and said, "For an average family like ours to shell out 20 grand, that's indeed sincere."

Abigail said, "Yeah, I get it. I'm not expecting my boyfriend's family to be like y ours, ready to shower me with loads of money."

Cornelia said, "That's true."

Abigail went on, "We're planning to go back to Rosenberg to meet my parents next month. If they also agree with our marriage, we'll go ahead and tie the knot."

Cornelia said, "You should indeed take him to meet your folks. They've got more life experience, they can judge people more accurately"

Abigail suddenly sighed, "I always thought getting married was a tough thing because the guys I liked were always too far away, and I wasn't interested in my suitors. But out of the blue, I got swept off my feet by an ordinary guy ."

Cornelia said, "That's indeed marvelous"

Half a month ago, Cornelia never thought she and Marcus would have had a relationship beyond boss and employee.

But now, not only were she and Marcus married on paper, they had also done the deed, and she could even be pregnant.

Abigail said,

"It's indeed strange. Cornelia, are you really planning to have kids now? Didn't you say you wanted to wait a few more years before having kids? Why the sudden change of mind? Is it because his family has fewer members and they hope you can pop out more offspring for him?"

Cornelia said, "Nah, he's not like that. He's always got my back, respects all my thoughts. My granny wants to see my kid. She's getting on in years, and we don't know how much longer she's got. I don't want her to leave this world with any regrets, so I've decided she should meet my kid sooner rather than later"

Abigail responded, "Comella, do you ever think you're being kinda selfish?"

Comelia asked, "How so?"

Abigail went on. "You seem to be treating Marcus like a baby-making machine"

Comelia said. "That's not true"

Abigail asked, 'Do you even like him?"

Cornelia thought for a moment, 'He's a looker, and he's loaded. What woman wouldn't like him? I suppose I do like him."

Abigail said, "You suppose? Are you sure about that?"

Comelia shot back. "I haven't had eyes for any other man. How does that make me selfish?"

Abigail said, "It makes you even more selfish. You're not even sure if you like him, and yet you've slept with him."

Cornelia said, "He's my husband! Our relationship is perfectly legitimate!"

Abigail was speechless. She was totally lost for words!

Cornelia said, "That's not what you told me before. You're the one who told me that he's my husband, I'm his only wife, and I can do whatever I want"

Abigail said, "I was just blowing smoke."

Cornelia said, "Well, I took it seriously! Whatever I did, you share the blame."

Abigail said, "Don't you dare try to pin your actions on me."

Comelia said, "If you're not to blame, then who is? Hurry back, and I'll treat you to a feast."

Abigail said, "Alright. I need to prepare some gifts for your kid. But it's really tough, the Hartley family is so rich, and they lack nothing. Your kid will get the best of everything Will they look down on what I buy?"

Your thoughtfulness is priceless, my kid will absolutely love it." Cornelia responded, as if she was already pregnant.

Abigail said, "Then you rest up, take good care of yourself."

Cornelia nodded, "Will do."

After ending the call with Abigail, Cornelia looked down at her stomach. Even though she was full, she drank more milk. If she was pregnant, the child would need the nutrients

After breakfast, Cornelia got bored and messaged Marcus, [I'm heading home for a bit.]

Marcus replied, [Come in.]

Cornelia said. [You're busy with work, I don't want to bother you]

Marcus replied again, [Come in.]

It was just a short message, but Cornelia could feel his determination. However, she didn't want to obey, intending to return to her room to change her clothes and leave. Just as she passed the study door, she was caught by a strong arm. With a gentle tug, Marcus pulled Cornelia into the study, saying. "Stay with me, don't go anywhere else"

His voice was deep and pleasant, yet firm and commanding.

“Ouch!” Cornelia’s eyes welled up with tears, almost falling down. His grip was strong. Even with little force, it was painful enough to make her wince.

‘Sorry Marcus quickly let go, “There are a lot of books in the study. Maybe you’ll find something you like?”

Comelia, clutching her sore wrist, snapped back, “I don’t want to read!”

Marcus. “Then what would you like to do? You tell me, and I’ll have it arranged.”

Cornelia, “I want to go home.”

Marcus, “This is your home.”

Comelia, “This is your home, not mine.”

Seeing the sorrow in his eyes behind those silver framed glasses, Cornelia felt like she might have gone too far. She moved closer, leaning into him, “You scared me with your harsh tone and hurt me. I was just trying to get back at you. Hug me now, and I’ll stay.”

Marcus didn’t move to embrace her, his gaze shadowed behind his glasses. Cornelia never thought her request for a hug would be rejected. Embarrassed, she blurted out, “You’re not going to hug me, are you? If you don’t, I’m leaving”

With those words, she pretended to walk away. But before she could take a step, Marcus pulled her back. Holding her tight in his arms, he murmured into her ear, “Cornelia, this is your home. I’ve had someone fetch your stuff from the rental. It’ll all be moved here soon.”

Cornelia, “What did you say?”

Marcus didn’t mind repeating, “I said this is your home. You won’t have to go back to that rental. I’ve sent someone to fetch your stuff.”

Cornelia shoved him angrily, “Marcus, who gave you the right to move my stuff without my permission?”

She tried to call Zack and tell him to stop anyone from moving her things. But before she could, her phone was snatched away by Marcus.

Cornelia was furious, “Marcus!”

Marcus, “Cornelia, you’re my wife. We’re married. Shouldn’t we be living together? Why do you insist on going back?”

Cornelia retorted, “Is that really what I’m upset about? I’m angry because you moved my stuff without asking me. Even as a married couple, there should be respect and space.”

“I can accommodate you in other aspects, but you must listen to me on this.” He couldn’t bear to be apart from her, to see her move back to the rental, to bear another day without her.

Cornelia was too heated to listen, “You’d better have your staff move my stuff back, or we’re getting a divorce.”

She tried to wriggle out of his grasp, but she was no match for him. As long as he held on, she couldn’t leave.

At the mention of “divorce”, Marcus lost all rationale. He threw her onto the desk.

A rough kiss followed.

She pushed him, kicked him, hit him, but couldn’t stop him. His presence was like a mountain over her, inescapable.

Hannah’s words echoed in her ears, “Cornelia, Marcus, Steven, Zavier, and Lucas are not what they seem. Once we marry them, unless they let go, death is the only escape,”

In the past, Cornelia couldn’t comprehend the despair Hannah and Skyler felt. Now, she was beginning to...

Feeling powerless, trapped like a fish in a barrel, at the mercy of Marcus! Her eyes widened, trying to make out the man before her, but his face morphed into something terrifying, as if he was going to devour her whole.

Suddenly, her phone, which Marcus had snatched away, rang.

She had different ringtones for different callers, so the moment she heard this ringtone, Cornelia knew it was Zack calling. She tried to push Marcus away but couldn’t. In her desperation, hot tears trickled down her cheeks. Her tears fell on Marcus’ hand, causing his heart to jolt, his sanity quickly returning.

Marcus finally stopped. He let her go, opened his mouth as if to say something, but no words came out.

Cornelia snatched her phone back, quickly answering, “Zack, come pick me up at Blueshell Mansion.”

Her voice was shaky and tear-choked. Without asking questions, Zack responded, “Wait there, I’m on my way.”

Cornelia quickly left, not sparing Marcus a glance, making a beeline for the exit.

She didn't even change, just dashed downstairs.

Marcus, "Cornelia..."

By the time he chased after her, Cornelia was already in the elevator.

What the hell just happened?

He didn't even understand why he had acted so impulsively. How could he hurt her over just a few words?

Cornelia, in nothing but a sundress, still bore the marks left by Marcus. Even after applying some ointment, the marks were still visible. Anyone who saw her would think she had been attacked. Some even approached her, "Did you run into some bad guy? Do you need us to call the police?"

Cornelia shook her head, appreciating their concern, "I'm okay, no need."

They still looked worried, "Don't be scared. If you've encountered a bad person, you must call the police. Don't stay silent because you are worried about embarrassment or for any other reason. The one at fault is not the victim, but the perpetrator."

The same words Marcus once said to her, but now he was the one who hurt her. A chill ran from the soles of her feet to the top of her head, making her feel as if she was in a walk-in freezer, shivering all over.

She lowered her head, hugging herself tightly. Because of her grief, even under the scorching sun, she felt no warmth, causing not only her body to be cold, but also her teeth to chatter from the cold.

Until, a strong arm wrapped her tightly in a warm, familiar embrace. He hugged her tightly, "Cornelia!"

His hug didn't calm her down but made her shiver even more violently. She suddenly looked up at him, her eyes filled with intense anger, "Don't touch

Marcus draped his jacket over Cornelia, "Alright, I won't touch you. Take a breather, maybe we can head home first, cool?"

Cornelia snapped back, "I told ya, it ain't my home."

Marcus was pretty stubborn about this issue. He knew exactly what to say to calm her down, but he chose not to. "Cornelia, we're legally married. Whether you like it or not, we're family. My home is your home. I belong to you, and everything I have is yours. We're in this together. No one can tear us apart..." Cornelia retorted, "I don't want that!"

While they were arguing, Zack drove up in a rush. He slammed on the brakes, stopping the car next to Cornelia, then got out, glaring at Marcus. "What the hell did you do to Cornelia?"

Cornelia knew their argument would only get more complicated with Zack involved. She opened the car door and quickly got in the passenger seat, "Zack, let's get outta here."

Without any explanation from Cornelia, Zack drove them home. He knew something must've happened between Cornelia and Marcus, but he didn't ask. After driving for a while, Zack noticed a limited-edition luxury car tailing them. Not many people in the world could afford such a car. So, Zack immediately knew who it was, "Marcus has been tailing us."

Cornelia didn't respond.

Zack lost his temper, slamming his fist on the steering wheel, "What the hell did he do to you? I'm gonna give him a piece of my mind!"

Cornelia stared ahead, still silent.

Zack continued, "Cornelia, talk to me!"

Cornelia asked, "My stuff at home, you didn't let anyone move it, did you?"

Zack replied, "I ain't a fool, I wouldn't let anyone touch your stuff without your say-so."

Cornelia, "Alright..."

Seeing her downcast expression, Zack couldn't help but say, "You gotta talk normal. Don't let a man get you down like this. He's just a part of your life. Even without him, you gotta live your life."

Zack was frustrated, just a few days ago, he thought Cornelia had found a good man. He was disgruntled, but he accepted it.

How long had it been since then? The guy was already hurting her!

Cornelia said, "Abby's coming home tonight."

Zack snapped, "Don't change the subject."

Cornelia continued, "I haven't had a BBQ in a long time. Let's have a BBQ tonight, just the three of us."

Zack said, "Cornelia, running away isn't the answer. No matter what happens, you gotta face it."

Cornelia said, "Abby told me Nash's family really likes her. She might bring Nash to meet her parents soon. By then, you can also go back to Rosenberg and see your parents."

Zack exclaimed, "Cornelia!"

Cornelia was willing to talk about anything but Marcus, "As for the studio's loss, I haven't got compensation from Clair Dennis yet. But that's okay, I made some money out of it. We can use that money for the studio's renovation. You just need to contact the renovation company."

Zack said, "I've been handling the renovation, you don't need to worry about that. Tell me, what's going on between you and Marcus? Why is he following us?"

Cornelia also saw the luxury car in the rearview mirror, Marcus must have been driving it himself, "I don't wanna talk about him right now."

Zack said, "There's a cultural industry base near our new place, set up by the government specifically to support businesses like ours. We can rent there, and the government even offers a subsidy fund, which makes the rent super cheap. I am considering whether we should move there. It would also make our commute to work shorter."

Cornelia replied, "Sounds like a sweet deal, we should definitely move."

Zack said, "After Abby comes back, we can go to the site together tomorrow and then decide."

"Sure," Cornelia suddenly said, "Zack, let's swing by the nearest Mercedes-Benz dealership."

Zack asked, "What for?"

Cornelia answered, "Since you handle our studio's business dealings, you and your car are essentially our studio's image. Now that we have this significant project, we need to get you a new ride."

There had been plans to get a new car for the studio, but they were put on hold when the studio got trashed recently. Renovating would set them back over twenty grand.

Hearing Cornelia say that they could get a car now, Zack was naturally very happy, "To the Mercedes dealership? You sure? Should we be looking for something around the twenty grand mark..."

Cornelia said, "Didn't you say you had a thing for the Mercedes-Benz E300 series last time? Let's get the E300."

Zack said, "The E300's likely going to cost between fifty and sixty grand. I feel that the budget for this level of car is a bit higher than what our studio can afford..

Cornelia said, "Our studio's pulling in at least a million a year, right? A car worth around sixty grand won't break the bank. Just tell me, do you want to drive this car or not?"

"Of course I do!" Zack looked at the luxury car trailing behind them through the rearview mirror, and said with a touch of envy, "I'd also love to be driving that Aston Martin following us. But do I deserve it?"

"Absolutely!" Cornelia took out her phone and used the navigation app to search for the Mercedes-Benz 4S dealership. It was close to their current location, and they could reach it in just a few minutes by car. "You focus on driving, I'll handle the navigation," she said.

"Alright!" Zack took another peek at the car behind them in the mirror; they made a U-turn, and the car behind them followed suit.

Did Marcus really have nothing better to do?

Marcus had an important meeting today. The original plan was to have it in person, but due to some circumstances, he switched to a virtual meeting.

Throughout the meeting, everyone could tell that he was in high spirits. Just how good was his mood?

President Hartley was all smiles, his eyes twinkling behind his silver glasses, a grin that was impossible to hide, like a love-struck teenager. Surprisingly, when the meeting reached a critical point, President Hartley suddenly left, leaving everyone very confused.

Nobody had a clue about what just happened.

Marcus' secretary Ben immediately jumped in to take the reins, "Let's keep the ball rolling, folks. I'll fill in President Hartley about the meeting."

Even without Marcus' involvement, the team's enthusiasm didn't take a hit. But the point was, it came to a critical point where Marcus was needed to make a decision.

Ben tried calling Marcus, and after numerous attempts, Marcus finally picked up.

Ben breathed a sigh of relief, "President Hartley, we need your decision. Is this a good time?"

Marcus, "Shoot."

Ben quickly relayed the meeting details. After listening, Marcus promptly made a decision and then said, “No need to hang up, I’ll conference call in with you guys.”

Ben, “Okay.”

Just then, a loud bang came from Marcus’ side.

A car accident!

Ben, “President Hartley, are you alright?”

Marcus lazily glanced at the car he rear-ended, “I’m cool. Keep the meeting going!”

Ahead, Zack saw the accident in his rear-view mirror, “Nelly, I think Marcus just had a fender bender?”

Upon hearing this, Cornelia immediately turned her head to look, indeed seeing two cars collided. The driver of the car in front had already gotten out, but Marcus was nowhere in sight.

Was he hurt?

Cornelia was worried sick, “Zack, pull over. I need to get out!”

Zack immediately did as told. Before the car had even fully stopped, Cornelia hurriedly swung open the door and bolted towards the scene of the accident.

He couldn’t park here, so Zack had to keep driving to find a parking spot.

After sprinting for a few dozen meters, Cornelia was huffing and puffing when she reached the scene. Once she got close, she saw Marcus sitting safely in his car, engrossed in a phone call, oblivious to her arrival, and hadn’t even gotten out of the car.

Marcus was okay. Cornelia finally let out a sigh of relief...

The driver of the car in front, seeing such an indifferent response from the driver who rear-ended him, was furious and started cursing, “Just because you drive a fancy car, you think you don’t have to step out after causing an accident, is that so?”

The guy grew even more irate, and Cornelia quickly intervened, “Sir, I’m really sorry, I’ll handle this.”

“You’ll handle this? Who are you to handle this? What’s your relationship with that man?” The man was yelling while turning around, but when he got a clear look at Cornelia’s face, the anger in his eyes instantly vanished, replaced by a discomforting greed.
