Chapter 901

Granny Luisa, tears streaming down her face, was a sight that broke Cornelia's heart "What's wrong? Why do you keep saying sorry?"

Granny Luisa confessed, "Actually, we've been keeping something from you. Your granny's death wasn't due to her illness suddenly getting worse, but to poisoning." The news hit Cornelia like a punch in the gut. She could barely believe what she was hearing as shock and pain swept over her. As her mind went into a whirl, Granny

Luisa continued, "John, my driver, had spiked our drinking water with a drug. This drug is harmless to most people but, if taken with the medication for kidney disease, it can be fatal."

Granny Luisa paused, then said, "Nelly, I didn't mean to hide the truth from you. I was just scared that you might leave Marc if you found out."

The fact that Granny Rebecca's death was no accident was a blow that Cornelia hadn't seen coming. Guilt and a whirlwind of emotions threatened to overwhelm

Cornelia, but she fought to stay calm. She knew she couldn't blame Granny Luisa or Marcus for this; she had to find who was really responsible.

"It's not your fault, and it's not Marc's either. All you need to do is hand John over to the police and let the law deal with him."

Granny Luisa responded, "You think I'd cover for John? When we found out it was him, Marc handed him and all the evidence over to the police."

"Thanks," Cornelia sighed in relief. She had thought Granny Luisa might ask for leniency for John. "You should rest now. I'm going to step out for a bit."

Granny Luisa tried to say something but then stopped. Some things were better left for her and Marcus to discuss.

The walls were thin and Marcus must have heard her conversation with Granny Luisa. "Did you know that my granny's death wasn't an accident?"

Marcus nodded, "Cornelia..."

"Come with me to my room. Cornelia didn't want to worry Granny Luisa, so she brought Marcus to her room. Once the door was closed, she asked him, "Why didn't you tell me?"

Marcus started, "I was worried..."

"Worried about what? That I would blame you?" Cornelia cut him off.

Marcus nodded.

Cornelia was pissed, "Marcus, do you think I can't tell right from wrong? I'm her only family, don't I deserve to know the truth?"

"Marcus, didn't we promise to always be honest with each other? I tell you everything, but what about you?"

"Why didn't you tell me about this? I only found out now that my granny was murdered. How am I supposed to face her now?"

Marcus tried to calm the upset Cornelia, "Cornelia, please, calm down! Let me explain!"

Chapter 902

Cornelia cut him off mid-sentence, "I know you've been good to my grandma, and you've done everything you could to help me take care of her and made sure we had no worries in Riverton I know you've been good to me, but what I want to know is why you couldn't just tell me straight?"

Facing her accusations, Marcus' gaze under his silver spectacles was filled with guilt and panic, "Comelia, have you ever felt what it's like to try so hard yet fail to get close to someone?"

Comelia responded, "Yes! When my father left me in a car accident, and now when my grandma left me, they were right next to me, but I couldn't reach them no matter how hard I tried"

"I feel the same way right now. Because I'm scared that you are right beside me, but I can't get close to you..." Marcus pushed up his silver glasses and suddenly laughed, his laughter deep. "I don't even know myself when you became such an important part of my life. I don't even dare to think about how I would continue to live if you left me Comelia, I like you, I'm afraid of losing you, so when it comes to dealing with things related to you, I become indecisive, completely unlike my usual self."

Cornelia was not fooled. She could feel that Marcus' way of handling Granny Rebecca's affairs was completely different from his past.

She hadn't expected that when she confronted him angrily, she would receive his sincere and direct confession. His voice was low, each word rhythmically spoken from his mouth, like beautiful notes striking her ears, sinking into her heart.

"Cornelia..." Marcus opened his arms and held her tightly.

*Cornelia didn't struggle, just let him hold her, "My grandma and John had no conflicts, why did he want to kill my grandma?

Marcus' tall body stiffened slightly, and Cornelia noticed something was wrong. "Does this have anything to do with me? You must tell me the truth, no hiding anything"

Marcus said, "John has been driving for my grandma for over twenty years. He was with my grandma before I was even born, and we always treated him like family. He was always loyal to our family, even to the point of blindness."

"So when he saw your scandal, he had some twisted thoughts in his mind, thinking you were not worthy of me, and wanted to kill you..."

The rest, Cornelia could guess without Marcus having to say, "He didn't find a chance to kill me, so he killed my grandma?"

Marcus nodded, "Yes."

Cornelia asked, "If it wasn't for me, my grandma wouldn't have died, right?"

Marcus replied, "A murderer always finds a reason to kill. It's not your fault. You can't punish yourself for someone else's mistakes."

We can't punish ourselves for other people's mistakes, Cornelia understood that. But to feel absolutely no guilt, that was impossible. "I think I need to put an end to the past."

Marcus said, "I've already had someone collecting more evidence of Orlando's crimes, I'll personally send him to jail and clear your name."

"No, just sending him to jail isn't enough." Cornelia pushed Marcus away, opened the door, "Zack, Abigail, come here."

Hearing her call them, Zack and Abigail immediately ran over, "Cornelia, is there something you need us to do?"

Cornelia took out her phone and forwarded the video Marcus had sent her to the group chat with the three of them, "You guys need to watch this video first."

Abigail and Zack opened the video and the more they watched, the angrier they got.

Zack even cursed in anger, "Orlando is such a jerk. I really want to chop him up!"

Compared to the two of them freaking out, Cornelia was calm as a cucumber. "I'm not about to sacrifice my freedom for some jerk. Can you guys get in touch"

h with the person in charge of the big screen at Central Plaza? If we can, I want this video to play on a loop for twenty–four hours. I want everyone in Rosenberg to know that I didn't seduce someone else's husband."

At that, Abigail nearly lost her voice "Cornelia, have you lost your mind? Do you realize that this will just invite more gossip?"

Cornelia scoffed. "I'm aware. But I'm not scared I didn't do anything wrong. I'm the victim here. Why should I live in shame?"

Seeing her stubbornness, Abigail turned to Marcus for help. "President Hartley, can you talk some sense into her? This is no laughing matter"

Marcus' eyes were glued to Cornelia, his gaze never leaving her for a second. He saw her determination.

He knew he couldn't change her mind, so he decided to support her instead. "Cornelia, if you're sure about this, I'll have Dylan take care of it. He'll probably find the person faster than you two running around like headless chickens."

Abigail was frantic. "President Hartley, instead of stopping Cornelia from doing something reckless, you're joining her in this madness?"

Marcus replied, "This isn't something shameful, nor should it be a stain on Cornelia's life. This incident has had a big impact on her. If we don't expose the truth, it could continue to affect her in the future.

To completely eliminate the impact of this incident on her, we need to lay bare the truth and let everyone know she's the victim. She never did those disgraceful things."

Zack also objected. "Do you really think those who slandered Cornelia don't know she's the victim?"

Zack looked around at everyone and continued, "I think they're well aware that Cornelia didn't do those disgraceful things. But they'd rather believe she did. In their minds, Cornelia is a girl, and a pretty one at that. That's her original sin."

Abigail agreed with Zack. "Cornelia, President Hartley, we're in Rosenberg, not Riverton. People here are much more conservative. If this video goes public, at least half the people who watch it will find fault with Cornelia, the victim. They might even think that Cornelia must have done something to mislead Orlando, which is why he drugged her. Why didn't he drug other girls otherwise?"

Cornelia had seen many similar incidents in the news. That was why she felt the need to stand up and help other girls who, like her, were harmed and blamed.

"Abigail, Zack, I know what I might be up against. But please trust me, I can handle the pressure." If Cornelia chose to stay silent, and so did other victims, it would only encourage the perpetrators.

If she stood up bravely, it might inspire other victims to do the same. Then, the criminals might start to fear, which would surely reduce such incidents.

Abigail and Zack knew Cornelia well. Once she made up her mind, no one could change it. Especially now that Marcus was firmly by her side, supporting her decision.

At that moment, Abigail realized what truly attracted Cornelia to Marcus. It wasn't his looks or his wealth, but his understanding and support. The soul connection might be the most important thing in a life partner.

Chapter 904

After Cornelia made a decision, Marcus got on the blower to Dylan right away. Upon receiving the instructions, Dylan nailed it in just a few minutes. He rang Marcus back, "President Hartley, I've sorted out the big screen stuff. We're good to go with the ad anytime. They've stopped running the other adverts"

Marcus shot back, "I've sent you the video, play it now"

"Alright" Dylan got the video rolling, but much to his surprise, it wasn't an advert pushing a product, but a video that made him cringe.

The man in the video had his face clearly visible, while the girl's face and several revealing parts were blurred out. Yet, he instantly recognized the girl as Cornelia, "President Hartley, is that your assistant Cornelia in the video?"

Marcus questioned, "How did you know it was her?"

Dylan replied. "Cornelia's a looker with a killer figure. Anyone who knows her would recognize her, blurred or not."

Marcus responded, "No worries, just do as I've instructed"

Dylan hesitated, "President Hartley, Cornelia's been your assistant for over a year. Even if she's ticked you off, airing her video in public like this isn't kosher"

Marcus was puzzled why Dylan would think he was out to get Cornelia, "In the video, Cornelia's the victim. We're trying to expose the perpetrator"

Dylan added, "Sure, Cornelia's the victim, but she's also a girl. Having this aired in public might make it hard for her to find a partner."

Marcus retorted, "She's married! She has a husband!"

Dylan asked, "Cornelia's married? Couldn't tell, she seems so young to be married. Does her hubby know about this? I bet he'd kick up a fuss if he knew"

Marcus argued, "Why would her husband fuss about it if she's the victim?"

Dylan said, "President Hartley, although that guy didn't physically harm Cornelia, he did take her to a room and got caught by his wife who accused Cornelia of seducing a married man. That's a black mark, and no guy would truly be okay with that. Even if her husband says he's okay with it, I bet he's not deep down."

Marcus, unable to change others' stereotypical views of a girl and not wanting to explain further, snapped, "Shut it! Just do your job."

"Alright" Dylan agreed quickly, but he felt bad for Cornelia. He had no idea what Cornelia had done to tick off President Hartley to the point of treating her like this.

He guessed that the company might announce a new assistant for President Hartley the next day. He wasn't sure if the next person to become President Hartley's assistant would be lucky or unfortunate.

Chapter 905

Today was the weekend, and Central Plaza was jam-packed. When a video started playing on the big screen at Central Plaza, it immediately caused a huge stir.

Residents of Rosenberg were all too familiar with the incident that happened years ago, so the moment they saw Orlando's face, they knew the leading lady in the video was Comelia. Before long, someone put the incident online. With Cornelia and others pushing behind the scenes, in just over an hour, the video had spread widely on the internet and quickly sparked heated debates.

Soon after, Comelia received a message from Hannah in Harbor City: "Cornelia, did you catch the Video Incident?"

Comelia replied, "I saw it."

*Hannah said,
"Comelia, I'm just gonna cut to the chase. Don't get mad, but doesn't the leading lady in the video look a lot like you?"*

Comelia answered, "You still recognize me, huh?"

Hannah took a few seconds before responding: "Is that really you?"

*Before Cornelia had a chance to reply, her personal and work phones both buzzed with new messages. But she didn't check them immediately and continued to reply to Hannah: "Yes, it's me. I was forced to run away from home because of this incident years ago. Now, it's time to settle the score "

Hannah asked, "What on earth is going on? Who released the video? You should get President Hartley to take action immediately to stop the video from spreading. But, I'm glad that whoever posted the video had some decency and blurred out your face. As long as you don't admit it, no one can confirm it's you.

Comelia replied, "We released the video ourselves. We did it to get more people to watch, firstly to prove my innocence, and secondly, I hope more girls who have been through what I have can come forward, ensure their own safety and no longer suffer in silence."

Hannah said, "Cornelia, you're so brave! You're setting an example for girls. This incident has garnered so much attention, and it's widespread. You can definitely help more girls step out of the shadows."

Cornelia replied, "I hope I can help them. I originally didn't plan to blur out the video, but President Hartley insisted I do. I didn't win that argument."

Hannah bluntly said, "Blurring out the video is to protect you, which is the right thing to do. Besides, no man, in love or not, would want others to see his wife undressed."

Hannah added, "I guess you must be busy now. Take care of your stuff. If you need any help, just let me know."

Cornelia said, "Okay"

After finishing chatting with Hannah, Cornelia started checking messages from others.

Among them, there was a message from Leonardo, who was usually flippant but absolutely reliable in times of need. He sent several messages in a row: "Comelia, is the leading lady in the Video Incident you?"

"If it really is you, I'll tell Marc right away to delete all these videos from the internet, not leaving a single one."

"Who's trying to hurt you? It's got me steamed! Tell me where that person is now. If Marc doesn't deal with him, I'll do it for you."

He sent so many messages without a reply from Cornelia, so he started getting anxious, "Comelia, why aren't you replying? Are you crying at home? Don't cry, you're the lady of the Hartley Group now. You've got Marc backing you up, and there's nothing to be scared of."

He was totally freaking out.

Cornelia texted back right away. "We posted the video ourselves. Don't worry about me, I'm fine."

Leonardo

replied, "You guys posted the video? Why would you post something like that? Do you know that the whole internet has seen it? Even if it's blurred, people from your company will surely recognize you. Aren't you afraid of their judgmental looks?"

*Cornelia responded, "I don't care!

Leonardo didn't text back.

Cornelia added, "Do you think if there was no video, people wouldn't look at me differently?"

The photo that Clair uploaded on the internet about Cornelia seducing someone's husband was actually a screenshot from this video, which easily led to misunderstandings. To protect Cornelia, Marcus had all her photos taken down online, but he couldn't erase people's memories

A lot of people at the company were already badmouthing Cornelia because of this photo. She decided to release the video to shut them up.

Leonardo said, "Cornelia, now you're not just Cornelia and President Hartley's assistant. You're also Marcus' wife, and the lady of the Hartley Group. You represent the image of the whole Hartley Group. Have you ever thought that once Marc announces your identity, all of this could be used against Marc and the company?"

A long string of messages, Cornelia glanced over, then read it carefully. After finishing, her mood suddenly became very heavy. Indeed d, as Leonardo said, before doing this, she had only considered herself and completely disregarded Marcus and the potential impact on the Hartley Group.

Even worse, she didn't think about the people around her!

Granny Luisa was already old and she definitely couldn't handle this. By doing this, Cornelia had undoubtedly punched Granny Luisa in the heart. With Granny Rebecca's passing. Granny Luisa's mental state was already fragile. With this blow, who knew what could happen next.

Just as Cornelia was holding her phone, doubting whether she had made a mistake, Marcus' deep and powerful voice rang out, "Once you decide to do something. just go for it. Don't overthink it."

Cornelia turned her head and looked into his gentle eyes. "Did Leonardo express his concerns to you as well?" she asked.

Marcus replied, "He's just over-worried."

"But I think he's right," Cornelia said. "Once our relationship goes public, many people will dig into my past. Everything from my past will be dug up and exposed in public. This video could potentially be used against you and the Hartley Group."

Marcus reached out and gently touched her head, 'Is it your fault?'

Cornelia shook her head.

"Then why should they use this to attack me and the company?" Marcus asked.

Cornelia responded despondently. "Those who want to attack you only need an excuse. They don't care if the excuse is valid or not. If I cause any harm to you or the Hartley Group, I'll feel guilty for the rest of my life."

Marcus said, "If we don't bring this out in the open, if we don't put the person who tried to harm you behind bars, someone might use some falsehoods to attack you, me, and our Hartley Group.

By putting out the video now, we not only solve the problem at hand, no one will be able to use this against you in the future"

Marcus spoke with such persuasive conviction, but Cornelia was still a bit concerned, "This won't affect you, will it?"

Marcus gently stroked her slender waist, drawing her into his arms, "Cornelia, are you underestimating your husband?"

Cornelia, "What?"

He added, "Your husband is not only Jeremy, but also Marcus."

In the past, Marcus was invincible in Cornelia's eyes, and there was no problem in the world he couldn't solve. When she first started working with him, she was a bit intimidated by the rumors about him, always worried he would resort to some underhanded methods.

Now he was still the formidable president of the Hartley Group, Marcus. Just because he had taken on the role of her husband, she had seen a vulnerable side of him that he had never shown to others, and she started to care and worry about him more.

She snuggled into his sturdy embrace, "Because I care about you"

Marcus, "All you need to do is believe in me."

Cornelia nodded vigorously, "Okay"

"Nelly, the popular actress Hannah has spoken up about your incident." Abigail rushed over with her phone, oblivious to the surroundings, "Nelly, look!"

Hannah had shared that video, with a simple caption – May all the bad guys get their just desserts! May all the good girls live freely!

Hannah was a popular and award-winning actress with a large fan base. As a public figure, her influence was naturally much greater than Comelia's.

Her speaking out at this time won her a lot of compliments from her fans and some rational netizens, who thought she was standing up for women. Of course, there were also some radical netizens and some unscrupulous media accusing her of doing this for attention

Hannah had been in the entertainment industry for many years and was used to these negative comments. She fired back, "Are your lives that miserable and dark? I'm speaking up for girls, and you say I'm doing it for attention. Fine, I admit it, I'm doing it for attention. I hope when you're in trouble, no one will stand up for you"

A comment below called her pretentious.

Hannah singled it out and replied, "Helping a friend is being pretentious? I could only say you probably don't have friends. Even if you do, I bet you're the type who's always calculating"

After firing back, Hannah felt a lot better.

Such idiots!

At the same time.

Robison felt nervous and made a phone call. A middle-aged man's voice came from the other end of the line, "What's up?"

Robison said, "My videos are gone from my phone, I can't understand how they ended up on the big screen at Central Plaza, and they're all over the internet now. I've lost my leverage over Cornelia and Orlando."

The other person stayed silent, not responding

Robison waited, growing more anxious, "Can you say something? What am I supposed to do now?"

The person scoffed. "If you can't even handle this little thing, what do you think you can do?"

Robison, "This ain't my fault, I kept the videos safe. I have no clue how they disappeared and ended up on Central Plaza's screen"

The person, "Who else knew you had this video?"

Robison, "I didn't even tell my wife until recently. But she definitely didn't leak the video. She's more worried about it than me."

The person, "So only the two of you knew? No one else?"

"No!" Just as he said this, Robison remembered Ayden, "Wait, there's one more person, he wanted to buy the video, but then he backed out."

The person, "Who?"

Robison. "I don't know his name, just that he came to Rosenberg with Cornelia's husband. He's tall, big guy, has a nasty scar on his face, looked like bad news."

The person, "What's the name of Cornelia's husband?"

Robison, "I'm not sure, I just know he's from Riverton, the whole family seems pretty wealthy."

"I look into it." The man hung up, immediately called another person.

Clair's voice came from the speaker, "Do you have good news for me?"

The man said, "Did you know Cornelia is married?"

Clair, "Yes."

Man, "Do you know her husband? Do you think we can handle him?"

Clair, "Her husband is not a big shot in Riverton, not scary at all. What worries me is her president, Marcus from the Hartley Group. If Marcus decides to protect her, it will be very difficult for us."

The man,
"Riverton may be Marcus' turf, but Rosenberg isn't. I plan to give her and her husband a lesson they won't forget in Rosenberg. I want them to know, no matter how many years have passed, I still call the shots in Rosenberg"

Clair, "I saw the news too, who leaked the video online?"

The man, "That useless Robison, he just let one guy see the video, and then it disappeared. I bet it was him."

Clair said,
"Regardless of whether he did it or not, we need to put some pressure on the m. But remember, be clean and don't leave any traces."

The man asked, "You still don't trust me?"

"Of course, I trust you" Clair paused, then said, "When all this is sorted out, come to Riverton. I'll treat you to dinner"

The man said. "If only I hadn't let you go back then."

Clair replied, "Was it my choice to leave? You couldn't provide the life I wanted, so you chose to let me go."

The man paused, then said, "Granger offered you a lot of money, but have you really been happy all these years?"

“Am I happy? Depends on what I’m after” Clair said with a faint smile “Granger cant give me the love I want, but I didn’t expect love from him anyway. What I’m after is his social status and wealth.”

The man said. “You haven’t changed a bit over the years. You’re always crystal clear about what you want, never hiding your thoughts”

Clair said. “You’re the one who knows me best, the one who helped me stand in the sun and enjoy the glory. What have I got to hide from you? I truly thank you. Without you, I might still be sharing an identity with that wretched woman”

The man knew what Clair was talking about, but did not continue the topic. “Granny Rebecca has passed away due to illness, did you know?”

Clair asked. “When did this happen?”

The man said.

“Comelia recently brought Granny Rebecca’s ashes back to Rosenberg. As for when exactly Granny Rebecca passed away, I’m not really sure.”

Clair said, “Better she’s gone. No one can recognize me now.”

The man said. “The one to pity is Hawthorne Stewart, the man is all heart. He probably can’t figure out why his wife divorced him, why the woman he loved so much would leave him and their daughter”

Clair said. “Serves him right. I have something else to tell you.”

The man asked, “What is it?”

Clair said, “Hawthorne has another daughter...”

The man immediately got excited upon hearing that, “What?”

“Let’s call it a day. I’ll fill you in when you come to Riverton.” With that, Clair hung up.

Even without Clair saying, the man could guess what was going on.

Who would have thought that after all these years, this woman could still surprise him.

After Hannah expressed her support for Cornelia, more and more celebrities and internet influencers came forward to back the girl in the Video Incident, encouraging all victims to bravely step forward.

One internet influencer said, "Last month, someone took upskirt photos of me, and not long after, I received the pictures and a blackmailing message. I was terrified, afraid that they would expose my photos, so I chose to pay and didn't call the police. Then they demanded more money, and in the end, I decided to report it. I hope all girls who have experienced the same thing can seek help from the police in time, don't choose to stay silent because you feel ashamed."

The support from these influencers helped spread the Video Incident further online. Most netizens sided with the victim, demanding that the suspect be severely punished

The incident received significant attention, and the police attached great importance to it, swiftly arresting the suspect and launching an investigation, even issuing an emergency notice. Their response was swift.

In the video, the suspect merely rendered the girl unconscious. His wife came back and stopped him from further committing the crime. So technically, it was attempted crime

This charge of attempted crime might only lead to him being detained for a few days before being released.

Hearing of such a light punishment, many netizens expressed dissatisfaction and continued to seek justice online.

As the public's anger grew, another girl reported to the police claiming she had been violated by Orlando, and she had surveillance footage as evidence.

The police quickly confirmed the situation.

This gal bravely spilled the beans, and one after another, people started to point fingers at Orlando The cops were getting more and more dirt on him.

Netizens did some rough math and figured Orlando's rap sheet could be miles long, with more than ten crimes. His wife might even have been his partner in crime, and they may have messed with minors.

When it came to minors, it was a whole new ball game.

Some pros estimated that if you count all his offenses, Orlando could be looking at hard time for over fifteen years. Even a fifteen year sentence wouldn't cut the mustard for the netizens, so the buzz kept growing online. Even in the wee hours, there were loads of folks still tuned in.

Things were pretty chill at Cornelia's place, as it was late and all the visitors had left. The only ones left were Zack's family and Abigail's family.

They'd been running around like headless chickens, but now they finally had a breather. They all whipped out their phones to check out the latest scoop.

Tanisha said, "Orlando's been nabbed."

Sonya replied, "Good! It's about time! If they'd caught him sooner, a lot of girls wouldn't have been hurt."

Tanisha added, "It's a shame Nelly's granny didn't live to see this day. If she could have seen him get collared, how good is that."

Sonya, looking at Cornelia kneeling before Granny Rebecca's um, said, "Yeah, I bet Nelly is up there giving her the good news"

She hit the nail on the head. Cornelia was indeed telling her granny the news of Orlando's arrest.

Cornelia said, "Granny, you see? Orlando's been cuffed. He can't hurt anyone anymore. No one will ever bring up that incident to hurt me again. You can rest easy now."

A big part of why Cornelia had the guts to go public with the video was her granny. Her granny had been blaming herself and crying before she passed. If this issue wasn't resolved, Cornelia knew her granny wouldn't be at peace in heaven. Now, this issue that had haunted them for years was finally resolved. Her granny would surely be relieved

Marcus, who was kneeling beside Cornelia, added, "Granny Rebecca, don't worry. I'll take good care of Nelly. I won't let anyone ever bully her again."

They didn't know if Granny Rebecca in heaven could hear them. The candles in front of the urn flickered twice, as if in response.

Cornelia, watching the flickering candles, asked. "Granny, did you hear that?"

The reply to Cornelia wasn't Granny Rebecca's voice, but the ringtone of her phone in her pocket, signaling a new message.

Cornelia took out her phone. The message was from an unknown number.

The message read "Cornelia, do you really believe that only John is responsible for your granny's death? If the Hartley family had nothing to do with it, why did they only tell you the truth after your granny was cremated? Haven't you ever wondered if they're hiding something? I've told you before, Jeremy and Marcus are two different people, but you wouldn't listen. If you'd listened to me sooner, your granny, the only family you had in this world, might still be alive. Cornelia, you should take responsibility for your granny's death!"
