

Chapter 661 Liam's Promise

Vivian's wounds were minor and healed within a few days.

However, she still needed to rest to recover from some internal injuries, so Liam decided to take her back to his place.

Even though she had been rescued, it didn't seem right for her to lose her memories like this. Liam started attempting to help her in recollecting her past.

Recalling their previous encounters, Liam shared with her the events that had unfolded since they first met.

Whenever Liam mentioned Black Spider, Vivian's complexion turned pale.

The mere mention revived painful memories of her past abuse and mistreatment at the hands of Cannon and Rennes.

Before, her plan had kept her focused, but now that it was over, the memories festered, becoming a lingering discomfort she didn't want to revisit.

Liam noticed the change in her demeanor, mistakenly thinking his approach was working. "Julie, is it coming back to you? Do you remember anything?"

Contemplating briefly, Vivian realized her emotions had betrayed her. Lying would only make Liam suspicious. So, she chose to be honest.

Nodding, then shaking her head, she finally choked out, "I do remember Black Spider. I was beaten. His name is... Cannon. I despise them!"

Even though she spoke hesitantly, a hint of killing intent seeped through her words.

Liam's brow furrowed. It wasn't that he found her killer instinct unsettling.

Yet, he sensed a subtle shift in the woman before him, who he knew as Julie.

However, he dismissed it, attributing it to the long-term effects of her time with Black Spider, and moved to comfort her.

After a long embrace, a thought suddenly flashed across Liam's mind.

Was this the perfect moment to reveal his true identity?

Seized by the idea, he took Vivian's hand, who was pretending to be Julie, and declared, "Julie, as soon as you're a bit better, I promise we'll get married!"

Upon hearing Liam's words, Vivian was thrilled. Being with Liam had always been her dream, and now she was one step closer to it.

Yet she kept her emotions in check. She couldn't commit to Liam so hastily.

She remembered Julie's last amnesia and the inexplicable affection she still had for Liam despite losing her memories.

Vivian chose to proceed cautiously. Her goal wasn't just marriage, but a lifetime with Liam. It made sense to be careful.

So she replied, tentatively, "We should discuss this further once my memories return."

Liam's face showed his compassion. He said with resolve, "Julie, the Black Spider has caused you so much pain. I swear, I'll dismantle them and bring down the Duncan family."

Vivian responded, her voice tinged with concern, "The Duncan family is quite formidable. Please don't put yourself in danger."

She meant every word. She wanted nothing more to do with the Black Spider, and doubted whether Liam could handle such menacing enemies.

Liam, however, stood his ground. "I have to do it. I didn't keep secrets deliberately. I'd planned to tell you after returning from Invone. Circumstances changed, but now I can be open to you. I am the heir to the Hoffman family in Invone. I fear no one, not even the Duncans. Just wait. Once they're dealt with, we'll marry."

With that, he turned and walked away, instructing members of the Dark Night Organization to keep a close watch on Julie.

The area was near their headquarters, highly secure, allowing Liam to set off with peace of mind, intent on fulfilling his promise to eradicate the Duncan family.

As she watched him walk away, a sparkle lit up Vivian's eyes.

She'd just discovered that the man she loved was the heir to the Hoffman family and had never been rejected by them.

Her satisfaction grew, along with her ambitions. In that instant, she fervently hoped for the ruin of the Duncan family and Timothy.
