

Chapter 747 Liam Was Back

Liam remained silent, subtly moving to one side.

Behind him, Sergio, under the protective cover of the Dark Night Organization, gradually entered the main hall.

Sergio scoffed, "Impressive, Demetrius."

Simultaneously, the Dark Night Organization's assault breached the exterior defenses of the Hoffman family's mansion. Everyone swiftly infiltrated the main hall.

Demetrius' eyes widened in surprise. When he stared at Sergio, it was as if he'd seen an apparition. With a shaky voice, he stammered, "Dad, why... How are you here?"

Clearly rattled, Demetrius struggled to articulate his thoughts. Sergio sneered, "Were you about to ask how I'm still breathing?"

Demetrius hung his head in embarrassment.

With a disdainful snort, Sergio remarked, "To think you'd betray me over such a little power."

Frantically, Demetrius tried to clarify, "I didn't mean to, Dad.."

"Don't address me as Dad. I no longer recognize a son like you," Sergio retorted sharply.

Shame painted Demetrius' features a deep red. He remained speechless, his gaze slowly hardening.

Barely concealing his anger, Demetrius replied, "Fine. You've never truly considered me your son. Let's then split the family wealth and go our separate ways. The Hoffman family will henceforth exist as two entities. Let's lead our lives without pointing fingers."

Upon hearing this, Liam, who stood nearby, scoffed in irritation. He shook his head, a smirk tugging at his lips. "You think you have a right to claim the family's assets? Collaborating with strangers against your own family? That alone warrants your expulsion from the Hoffman family. Today, I prioritize justice over blood ties."

Demetrius retorted icily, "Your opinion is irrelevant. Remember, I am your uncle. Your blatant disrespect is proof of your lack of upbringing."

With that, he gave a sly wink to his men, signaling them to teach Liam a lesson.

Liam's demeanor remained frosty. He moved so swiftly that he appeared ghost-like. To the onlookers, it was as if a shadow streaked past them, only to find moments later that they had been impaled by a spear.

Unyielding, Demetrius barked at his remaining men, "Attack! Let's see how many he can take down."

Hearing the command, the Dark Night Organization members were eager to come to Liam's aid, but with a simple hand gesture, he signaled for them to stay back.

In a split second, Liam lunged into the battle, his spear dancing. Soon, all that remained were Demetrius and his son, Leandro, both standing amidst the fallen.

Fear etched on his face, Demetrius, seeing Liam approach with a menacing stride, warned, "Think twice before you act. The dynamics in Invone have changed. Spare us, and we promise to leave Invone."

Liam replied with a chilling grin, "Save your breath. Every member of the Duncan family will meet their fate, and none will escape my reach."

With that, Liam swiftly detained both Demetrius and Leandro, positioning them before Sergio.

His task was to apprehend. The decision on their fate lay with Sergio.

Leaning in, Liam posed a question to Sergio. "The traitors stand before you. How would you like us to proceed?"

Chapter 747 Liam Was Back

 +120 Points at most

 I want no ads >