

Chapter 1623 I Want To Make Our Relationship...

Caught off guard, Sean turned around silently and pressed the elevator button mechanically.

Janet's face turned red when Brandon displayed his affection for her so blatantly. She shook his hand and whispered, "Don't... Don't say something like that."

Brandon was amused when he saw how red Janet's ears were. He pretended as if he couldn't understand what she meant and teased, "What should I not say?"

She wanted to tell him not to display their affection in public, but she couldn't bear to say it out loud. She knew that Brandon was only pretending to be dumb. So, she glared at him and pinched his waist angrily.

Brandon laughed, not feeling an ounce of embarrassment. "Why are you angry? How can I understand what you're thinking if you don't tell me? What shouldn't I do?"

Janet took a deep breath and bottled up her shyness. "You didn't say you would introduce me in front of hundreds of reporters. You're overdoing things. Forget it," she whispered quickly.

Brandon's heart fell, and he asked with a tinge of disappointment, "Do you not like it?"

"No... It's not that," Janet said, embarrassed. She lowered her head and muttered, "It's too showy. I'm afraid it will create a backlash and impact your reputation negatively."

When Brandon was about to assure Janet that she was overthinking things, Sean hurriedly turned around to back Brandon up. "Mrs. Larson, please don't stop Mr. Larson from making the announcement. He wants everyone to know that his wife is kind and beautiful."

"Sean," Brandon called out. He raised his eyebrow and glared coldly at Sean. "One more word and half of your annual bonus will be deducted," he warned.

Sean quickly shut his mouth and turned around, staring at his shoes.

Sean's teasing made Janet blush. She buried her head in Brandon's chest and said, "I think it's overdone. Don't do it."

Brandon squeezed her hand gently and said softly, "But I want everyone to know you are my wife and show them how beautiful you are. Just as you said, you are the one who will stand by me."

With Janet's altered appearance, people with ulterior motives might exploit it as an opportunity to fabricate rumors. Therefore, he wanted to take this chance to show the world that she was his wife. This way, he could better protect her.

Janet's face was as red as an apple as she felt the joy of her beloved man announcing her identity in public. She couldn't help beaming as she asked. "Do you really think I'm the perfect woman for you?"

Brandon gazed into her eyes and nodded firmly. "Yes," he said.

As thrilled as Janet was, she quickly calmed down when she thought of Brandon's reputation and career. "I know you love me, but we're not in a hurry to announce our marriage. You should deal with the rumors about the murder first."

Brandon's eyes lit up at Janet's suggestion. He stared at her with his eyes burning with passion. "Do you mean that as long as I clarify the rumors about the murder, you will agree to make our relationship public?"

Janet didn't expect Brandon to be excited over an announcement. "We are a couple. Why can't we make it public? Didn't I agree to make our relationship public before?" she asked curiously.

Brandon's expression subtly changed and said plainly, "You used to keep a low profile and wanted to expand in the design industry with your own merit. You never made our relationship public, nor did you allow me to make it public."