After Simone agreed, the man smiled and said, "Thank you very much! Take this seal and keep it."

Simone imprinted her breath on the seal and placed it in an embroidered purse tied around her waist.

She then introduced herself and the other two, "I'm Simone, he's Aaron, and he's Leon. What's your name?"

The man replied, "I'm Bailey Shawn. Nice to meet you all."

Simone smiled. "Alright! Now that our group is assembled, let's figure out how to make money."

The other three nodded in agreement.

Aaron looked at Simone and asked, "How do we make money? Do you have any ideas?"

He thought carefully but couldn't come up with any solutions. So, he could only follow orders.

Leon and Bailey also looked at Simone as if saying, "We'll listen to you."

Since entering the city, Simone had been observing and thinking about the best way to make money in the next few days.

She already had a few ideas in mind.

She said, "I've noticed that many people come into Cubilis wearing clothes they bought themselves. But their makeup and clothes don't match very well. So, we can set up a stall and help people with their makeup."

In Cubilis, there were antique inns. Many tourists would stay for a few days or even longer before leaving. So, if they weren't good at doing makeup themselves, they would have to go to a specialized rouge shop in Cubilis to get dressed up.

After having traveled through ancient times many times, Simone was quite good at matching and makeup.

Leon was the first to support the idea. "This is a good idea.

Simone looked at the three of them and asked, "What are your skills?"

Leon thought for a moment. Does singing and acting count?" That was his current specialty.

Aaron helplessly replied, "I can only sing and dance, and I'm skilled in modern instruments."

Simone said. "Then you can go and attract customers. You only have this face to rely on for now, but it's somewhat useful."

Although Aaron had lost popularity, he did have a handsome face. It shouldn't be a problem to bring in some girls to do makeup.

Aaron thought to himself, Should I be grateful that I still have a handsome face! Otherwise, I might have been abandoned.

Simone smiled and said. "That's great. Let's get started then."

They first went to Cubilis' management office and rented a temporary stall for the day.

Simone requested the production team to provide a makeup set and purchased some inexpensive accessories.

The bamboo flute and harp were also prepared by the production team.

Within half an hour, the stall was ready.

Fans of Simone gathered around, affectionately calling her.

Simone responded with a pleasant smile and waves, earning cheers from her supporters.

When Bailey returned after changing clothes, a crowd of girls gathered to watch.

Simone nodded at him, signaling him to start playing the harp.

With Simone's assistance, Bailey transformed his simple religious bun into an ancient hairstyle, radiating an ancient handsome man.

Clad in a white brocade robe, he didn't wear any makeup.

As he raised his hand to stroke the ancient harp, he exuded the aura of a noble young man from centuries ago.

Amidst the nobility, there was a sense of ethereal detachment.

Graceful and with an impeccable temperament, he resembled a jade tree in the wind.

Soon, he attracted a lot of onlookers.

Bailey played a song. The spectators applauded and called for another one.

However, next was Leon, who played the flute.

He had a cold and handsome appearance, wearing a black brocade robe. Since he had acted in many period dramas, he seemed like a scion stepping out of ancient times.

It was equally eye-catching. Although he garnered attention and sighed for his remarkable appearance, whispers about his past as a 'sembag ex-boyfriend' tilled the air.

Leon did have the looks to attract Simone before: his physique and appearance are quite outstanding”

“However, it doesn't change the fact that he's sc*m.”

“Even though I appreciate his good looks, I can't accept his sc*mmy nature.”

“This kind of sc*m ex-boyfriend who cheated on Simone is just like Simone's sc*m ex-brother. He can only rely on his looks.”

“So, it's better to focus on Simone and the guy in white next to her.”

“Too bad Zachy is in another group. Otherwise, this group would be all about the handsomes and beauties.”

“Zachy is wearing a red brocade robe. He is exuding a carefree and elegant demeanor. He is so handsome!”

When Leon heard the hushed discussions around him, he almost played the wrong tune.

He felt helpless because he had become the representative of the sc*m ex-boyfriend.

But he was really innocent; he never had an affair.

But now he couldn't clear his name.

Meanwhile, Aaron approached women with mismatched makeup and clothes, offering Simone's makeup services at an affordable price of nine dollars per person.

There were quite a few interested ladies.

Also, there was a person who looked disdainfully at Aaron. "You, the sc*m ex-brother, stay away from us! Even if you didn't promote, we would still support Simone and get our makeup done."

Aaron was speechless. Well, I am the representative of the sc*m ex-brother now. It's really unfair. This title should belong to Andrew.

Soon, the ladies who wanted Simone to do their makeup formed a line.

Leon, Aaron, and Bailey looked at each other helplessly; they felt like human billboards attracting a crowd.

However, to avoid being outdone by the other two among the three, they continued with Simone's arrangements.

Simone worked quickly. She could do a customer's makeup and match their accessories in about ten minutes.

The key was that each person's makeup and accessories were unique perfectly highlighting Initially, everyone came for her. But later, they came for her skills.

Jonah couldn't help but sigh. Simone's skills are so impressive that she could undoubtedly thrive and earn a living anywhere she chooses to go.

Simone's fans in the live broadcast room cheered for her, praising her amazing talent.

Even fans of other guests switched over to watch Simone do makeup, and Bailey play the piano.

As for the other two men, although they were attractive, they were ignored by everyone because of their sc*ummy behavior.

Of course, their fans were an exception.

This group found success and started making money, while the other two groups struggled in comparison.

Chapter 282 Can We Change?

While throngs of people were queuing up to have their makeup done by Simone, a disagreement was breaking out among Zac's group.

Jodie suggested, "Why don't we continue performing? I can play the harp and do a traditional dance."

Andrew agreed, "That's a good idea. Jo's dancing is really impressive."

However, Zac sneered, "Haven't you guys already done all that in the past two issues? Especially in the last episode, you played instruments and danced for so long but earned so little money. Haven't you learned from that experience? And now, you want to embarrass yourselves again in this ancient city where there are plenty of people who can play the harp and do traditional dance?"

Jodie thought to herself, This guy is going too far. He's so mean. She was a professional. How could those people compare to her? How would she be an embarrassment?

Andrew found Zac's words particularly offensive and grumbled unhappily, "You're crossing the line."

Zac glanced at him and said, "What? Can't I speak the truth?"

Andrew thought to himself, This guy is a real jerk. He sarcastically commented, "With such a sharp tongue, you probably won't find a girlfriend in the future." It was the first time he had encountered someone with such a venomous mouth.

Zac sneered. "If I had to choose between being single for life or dating your sister, I'd rather be single."

Andrew choked, "You-My sister, Jo, won't be interested in you." He had heard rumors about Zac being arrogant and venomous in the industry, especially towards women who approached him, and he thought the rumors were exaggerated. But now, he realized that the rumors were an understatement.

A look of relief washed over Zac's face. "That's great."

Andrew couldn't even come up with a comeback for that, while Jodie was so aggrieved that she wanted to cry. She had only approached him a few times, but why did it sound like she was a terrifying monster coming after him when he said it?

Zac was becoming more and more unbearable. Simone must have said a lot of bad things about her to him behind her back.

With teary eyes, she said in a choked voice, "Fine, I won't play the instruments or dance anymore. So, what do you guys suggest we do next? Just don't ask me to do it later.

Seeing Jodie like this, Zac was disgusted. “Stop acting all teary-eyed and making it seem like someone bullied you. If you want to be an angel, then act like it properly. An angel doesn’t cry with red eyes every day and should be all ethereal, giving off a sunny and refreshing feeling You’re more like what they call a pretentious b*tch online.” He was really annoyed that Jodie always used these few fixed expressions, which only the Gray Family brothers. could look at without getting tired.

Keira couldn’t help but laugh at his comment. “You really understand.” That meant that she agreed with what he said.

Raising his chin, he said proudly, “Of course, I am the master of identifying b*tches.”

Whether it was before or after his debut, countless pretentious girls were trying to hook up with him, and Jodie’s attempts were simply not worth mentioning.

It was obvious that she was just a pretentious girl, but she insisted on pretending to be an angel, which even he felt embarrassed about on her behalf. Even if she wants to be an angel, she should be more like Simone.

Jodie’s expression froze because she didn’t expect Zac to have even more venomous words. “If you’re so capable, then go make money on your own.” She couldn’t help it, turning around. angrily and storming off.

If she continued to stay with him, she was afraid she would go crazy. This jerk always insulted her, and this was being broadcast live. Her reputation would be ruined, so she decided not to be with him for the time being. Otherwise, her online reputation would be even harder to clear

Jodie’s disappearance clearly showed that she was driven away by Zac. Seeing this, Andrew glared at Zac. “You have no manners. We’ll make money separately.” It would also save them from this jerk who always bullied Jodie.

Zac showed a surprised smile. “That’s great.”

He couldn’t ask for more! He and Keira thought that Jodie had made the right decision. They were already tired of her pretentiousness and pitiful attitude. It was already the third episode, couldn’t she change?

Andrew was speechless with Zac and turned around to chase after Jodie, who was walking and crying as if she had been badly bullied

In the live broadcast room, the audience was divided into two groups. One group supported Zac, agreeing that Jodie was always like this and that it was annoying to watch. She was just a pretentious b*tch, so why cry when it was pointed out?

Chapter 282 Can We Change?

This was the majority's opinion.

There were also a small number of Jodie's fans and viewers who thought Zac went too far. If they didn't even try, how would they know that Jodie wasn't good enough? It was too much of him to mock and embarrass her. They called for Jodie to make money using her own.

methods and then come back to prove Zac wrong.

Andrew's thinking aligned with these viewers. First, he comforted and reassured Jodie. Nevertheless, because of what happened at the hospital before and both of them were paying attention this time, he didn't hug and comfort her.

After Jodie was coaxed, he said, "Let's play the harp and dance. I don't believe we'll earn less than Zac Turner. This is an ancient city, and what everyone likes is the harp and traditional dance. Don't listen to Zac Turner's nonsense because he doesn't know anything. Let's show him who's right and prove ourselves. We won't back down from a challenge."

Jodie thought the same way and was particularly indignant. Why did Zac look down on her? She wanted to show him that she could earn money based on her abilities. However, she didn't say it out loud like Andrew did.

Firstly, Zac Turner had too many fans, and she was afraid of being criticized. Secondly, she hadn't given up on him. Zac was so protective of Simone and so sarcastic toward her, so she wanted to make Zac hers and then switch roles-let him protect her and criticize Simone.

So, after considering it for a moment, she said, "I'll listen to you, Andrew."

After all, it was Andrew who said it. If she faced criticism, he would be there to support her and also give her an escape route. If she couldn't earn much money like in the second round, it wasn't because she insisted on doing it that way, but because Andrew influenced her.

Titus and Luca, who were watching the live broadcast, felt a sense of familiarity when they heard Jodie's words.

Titus sneered, "You see if she messes up, the blame will fall on Andrew."

Luca agreed, "That's absolutely true." He had personally experienced it and understood it deeply.

Before, when he participated in variety shows himself, he didn't notice this. But now, watching this live broadcast, he had a completely different feeling. It could only be said that the onlookers had a clearer view.

He sighed. "The more I watch, the more I realize that Jodie is so scheming. And she uses all of it on the people who truly care and love her."

If he hadn't experienced it himself, he wouldn't have believed that this was his sister, who had been spoiled for over ten years.

Titus now has a clearer understanding of the situation and sneered, "How can she achieve your goal if she doesn't focus on the people who truly love her? Will others care about her? Just look at Zac Turner and Keira Pearson. They don't spoil her." Only those who have loved her before, like them, would spoil her like this. "Jodie Gray is just taking advantage of our love for her."

Luca nodded. "Exactly, we spoiled her while she's doing the meanest things." He then gave a bitter smile. "You know, did we also have this kind of feeling toward Simone before?"

They seemed to take advantage of Simone's concern for her family and treated her that way. because they always felt that no matter what happened in the end, she would always be a good sister to them.

Titus body stiffened. "Now that you mention it, we really did act that way. All these years, we have been greatly influenced by Jodie." They had spoiled Jodie for over a decade, but she has. also influenced us for over a decade. Thinking about it now seemed a bit scary to him.

Luca replied, "We have all been corrupted by Jodie. The saying 'birds of a feather flock together must have some truth to it. If Simone hadn't been lost when she was young and. grew up with us... we wouldn't have turned out like this."

The more the two brothers thought about it, the more they realized it was true and decided that in the future, they would continue to keep their distance from Jodie. Otherwise, what would they do if they were corrupted and influenced again?

In Cubilis, Jodie and the production team discussed and agreed on a plan. The production. team provided them with a harp and also helped them communicate with the city management, who agreed to let them perform and sell their art in a designated area. As the city wanted to maintain better development, they needed to attract more people to visit, and appearing on a variety show was a way to advertise the city. As long as they didn't go overboard, the management of the city was easy to negotiate with.

After setting up the harp, Jodie walked over and sat down while Andrew took the initiative to attract people to come and watch. Soon, she started playing the harp confidently. With Andrew's efforts and the high foot traffic on this street, many people initially gathered to watch. However, as they listened, quite a few people left.

Andrew couldn't help but stop someone and ask, "Why did you leave?"

The puzzled tourists replied, "We aren't interested, so we left. What's the big deal?"

Andrew asked, "With such beautiful harp music, don't you want to listen a bit more?"

The tourists gracefully responded, “We prefer the girls playing at the harp recitals held in the old town.”

Another person chimed in. “The guy from Simone’s group on the next street plays the harp much better than you.”

She pulled her friend, who Andrew had stopped, and said, “Let’s go to the next street to listen. Even the lousy ex-boyfriend playing the flute is more entertaining than this.”

At least Leon had an attractive face. What was so special about Jodie? If they wanted to see beautiful girls, why not go see Simone?

Watching the people leaving one after another, Andrew thought, Simone is our nemesis.

After Jodie finished playing, she realized that more than half of the audience had left, and when Andrew went to collect tips, hardly anyone gave him any money.

Her face froze. How could this be? She felt like she had played exceptionally well just now.

At the same time, Andrew was going crazy. He had never lacked money in his life, but now he had to beg for tips. Yet, no one gave him anything. He wanted to storm off in frustration, but to prove Zac wrong, he held back.

With a thick skin, he approached a seemingly approachable girl and asked, “My sister played so beautifully. Don’t you think you should show some appreciation?”

The girl took a step back and shook her head. “I thought it was quite ordinary. The town organizers hold a recital every five days, and the people playing at the recital are better than your sister. Not only is it free, but they also provide complimentary tea and pastries. The guy from your other group on the next street played the harp beautifully, and he didn't charge, either. So, where do you get the audacity to ask for money?"

She was a fan of Simone and came here to listen to Jodie to belittle them. Little did she expect to be caught by Andrew right after arriving. Of course, she had to tell the truth.

It wasn't that she was intentionally criticizing Jodie, but many people played the harp better at the recital. Even the hired musicians at the restaurants played with more flavor than Jodie.

The girl's words received agreement from many people. "Indeed, there are many people in the town who play the harp better than this. It's fine to listen for free, but if they want money, I don't think it's worth it."

"I feel the same way. I thought it was free, but they want money. This is the old town, and there is no shortage of people who can play the harp. Why don't you go out and rob on the streets? With this level, you have the nerve to ask for money?"

Andrew thought, It's embarrassing and awkward.

Chapter 283 Simone Is Their Nemesis

It was not just him who felt awkward but also Jodie, who never expected such a situation to arise. To prevent the atmosphere from becoming more awkward, she immediately stood up and asked Andrew to prepare to leave, and she started dancing.

Since these people didn't like her playing the harp, dancing should be fine, right? She had been practicing dancing since she was young and could dance very professionally. Unexpectedly, as she danced, more and more people left.

They even commented, "This dance is just average, not as good as the girls at the ball."

"I agree; money."

let's go to the ball tomorrow instead. The best part is, they don't even ask for

“If her dance could amaze me, I would be happy to give her a tip, but this one didn’t.”

“Let’s go, we won’t pay, and we won’t watch.”

Then, another group of people left one after another. Almost all the onlookers of Jodie’s dance had disappeared. While dancing, Jodie was also observing. Who would have thought it would turn out like this? It made her unable to continue dancing halfway through.

Andrew was also quite embarrassed as he hadn’t anticipated such an outcome. Approaching Jodie, he offered her comfort, saying, “Jo, let’s stop dancing. It’s not that you danced poorly; it’s just that they don’t appreciate it.”

However, his words only served to further embarrass Jodie. She thought to herself that if Andrew didn’t know how to provide comfort, he shouldn’t have tried at all; it was only inviting trouble.

Mustering a somewhat reluctant smile, she said, “Andrew, I overheard them mentioning the abundance of free performances and dances here. Naturally, if we ask for money, there won’t be many spectators.”

That was what she believed. It wasn’t that she lacked talent; it was simply because these people wanted to enjoy the performances without paying.

“Let’s brainstorm alternative ways to earn money.”

Simultaneously, she regretted their earlier outburst of anger. They shouldn’t have listened to Andrew’s encouragement to continue playing the harp and dancing. At the same time, she felt a twinge of annoyance that she hadn’t done more research and acquired more knowledge before coming to this city.

Who could have foreseen that there would be free recitals and dances in the city? Now, not only had they failed to humiliate Zac, but they had also brought embarrassment upon themselves.

Chapter 284 Sure Enough, This Guy Came Prepared

Jodie’s harp and dance performances had failed, so they returned the harp and other items to the production team. Earlier, she had overheard people discussing something. They mentioned that Simone and the others were on a nearby street, and an amazing guy was playing the harp.

Although she was curious about who it could be, she was even more interested in finding out how Simone was making money this time. So, she suggested to Andrew that they should explore the area and see if they could find any opportunities to make money. With Andrew in tow, she went to the nearby street.

In the live chat, the viewers were all cheering.

Wasn't Zachy supposed to be proven wrong? Is this it?"

"This ending is hilarious.

So, Zachy was right all along. There's no shortage of talented harp players and dancers here. Jojo just embarrassed themselves."

Jojo never listens to advice, and now they've embarrassed themselves again."

"Zachy: I can't take it anymore. It's impossible to reason with this stubborn person.'

'Zachy's eyes are sharp indeed.

This twist is so satisfying. Where are the people who were just insulting Zachy? Why aren't they speaking up now?"

It can only be blamed on Jojo's incompetence. They failed to prove Zachy wrong and ended up embarrassing themselves. Otherwise, they would be jumping in joy right now.'

I love how straightforward and tactful Zachy is. If you don't like it, stay away. Why should men always accommodate delicate flowers?'

He has always had this kind of bad behavior, and now you know.'"

Our Zachy has always been sarcastic and has a bad temper. Jojo better stays away in the future!

"Zachy..."

After Zac entered the entertainment industry, he never hid his temperamental personality. He would make self-deprecating jokes, and his fans would also join in. But when it came to haters, they would fiercely defend him. After all, he was their idol, and they couldn't tolerate others bullying him.

This time, it was the fans' turn to fight back, and all the people who had previously insulted Zac were silenced because these fans and viewers didn't expect the outcome to be exactly as Zac had said. The key was that Jodie was indeed a bit incompetent, and they couldn't find a way to fight back.

On the other side, Jodie and Andrew walked to a street and saw a crowd of people gathered ahead. There were even people lining up. As they approached, they realized that these people were not here to watch the new guest play the harp or Leon play the flute. They were here to see Simone and wait for her to help with their makeup.

Andrew saw the lively scene and couldn't help but say, "Can this also be done? I have to say, this person plays the harp, similar to how you play! Is it because more girls are watching, so the new guest is so popular?" He said this mainly to comfort Jodie but also deliberately said it for the people in the live broadcast room to hear.

Jodie blushed slightly, feeling embarrassed. She had specifically studied the harp, so naturally, she could tell that the new guest played very well and had a high level.

Andrew's words, on the other hand, made her feel awkward. In order not to make the audience dislike her, she said, "It's just that my skills are not as good as his. The new guest they found is talented, attracting so many people."

The implication was that Simone and the others were able to become so popular thanks to the new guest.

In her heart, there was also a hint of jealousy. Why is Simone so lucky? They managed to find a new guest who was not only good-looking but also talented. It's a pity that the new guest isn't part of our group.

Andrew agreed, "Yeah, they are really lucky." He thought for a moment and suggested, "Jo, why don't you also try making money by doing makeup for others?"

Jodie grumbled silently, How could I possibly learn from Simone? It's embarrassing. Besides, she only knew how to do her own makeup, not others'. Silently, she criticized Andrew for having such low emotional intelligence. "It's not a good idea to learn from them. Let's think of other ways to make money ourselves. Or we could go find Mr. Turner and Miss Pearson. After all, we are a team, and it's better to act together."

She decided to continue pursuing Zac. Seeing Simone and the others making money and gaining popularity again made her feel bitter and uncomfortable. She especially wanted to see Simone's misfortune and had a feeling that as long as she could snatch Zac away, she would be able to suppress Simone's luck to some extent, just like when she snatched Leon and her five brothers.

She encouraged herself that although she had been defeated by Zac many times, the greater the difficulty, the greater the challenge. Then, she took a deep look at the good-looking new guest, hoping that his eyes wouldn't be blind.

Andrew didn't want to look for Zac as they always had unpleasant interactions, but it was his first time participating in a variety show, and he didn't know how to react. "Alright, I'll listen to you."

Hence, they left the street and went to find Zac. After asking the program staff, they found Zac and Keira at a restaurant where they were currently working as waiters to earn money. As a result, they attracted many tourists to come and eat. Just as they finished serving a round of dishes, Zac saw Jodie and Andrew, who had come looking for them.

His originally smiling, handsome face turned dark. Why did these two troublemakers show up? He couldn't be bothered and went to the kitchen to continue serving dishes.

Andrew stopped him and said, "Zac Turner, what are you doing here?"

Zac turned around and replied impatiently, "Can't you see?"

Andrew asked with a hint of disdain, "Is your idea of making money? Serving food to others?"

Raising an eyebrow, Zac retorted, "What's wrong with serving food? It's hard work and earns money, and we're not eating your family's food. Are you discriminating against certain occupations? Your thinking is wrong. Whether it's using your brain or physical labor, all work is honorable. Work doesn't distinguish between high and low status."

He truly believed in this. Although he was born into a wealthy family and was a top star in the entertainment industry, he respected people in every profession. As long as one earned a living through their abilities and didn't rely on others' resources, why should there be a distinction between high and low status?

That was why he didn't like Andrew's condescending attitude. If it weren't for the Gray Family, someone like Andrew wouldn't even be able to serve food properly and probably have to rely solely on his looks to make a living.

Andrew choked, but he wouldn't admit his thoughts. "I don't think that way. I'm just curious about why you guys are doing this kind of work."

Zac replied, "We do it to earn money and have a place to stay at night. As long as we can make money, it doesn't matter what kind of work we do." He smirked at the two of them and continued, "Why did you guys come here? You're not here to embarrass yourselves, are you?"

Andrew really wanted to drag Zac out and give him a beating. This guy was toxic and always hit where it hurt the most. To protect Jodie's reputation, he said, "We heard from tourists that the city holds free concerts and dances every few days, and we can't make much money by performing. So, we're not going down that route. We're a team, and it's not good to act alone. so we came to find you guys."

In saying so, they were also trying in save face. Despite that, Zac didn't give them any face and sneered, "Stop pretending Everyone knows who you are. I told you before that this is an ancient city with plenty of people who can play instruments and dance, but you didn't listen. Now, we're doing this kind of service work. If you can swallow your pride, join us. Suppose you can't, then leave. I have to work and don't have time to waste with you. Figure it out yourselves."

With these two burdens, he and Keira were really unlucky.

Andrew was furious watching Zac mock them and leave. He wanted to explode, but Jodie held him back. "Andrew, let's talk to the restaurant owners and work here to earn money."

If Zac and the others could do it, so could they. Andrew couldn't help but feel annoyed as he went to find the shopkeeper with her.

Knowing that the two of them were part of Zac's group, the shopkeeper didn't refuse either, allowing them to work as temporary shop assistants.

At first, Andrew couldn't bring himself to do it. After being looked down upon and mocked. by Zac and Keira, he didn't want to be underestimated by them and reluctantly went ahead. Because of this, he was heavily criticized by the viewers on the live stream.

On the other side, Simone calculated the time and asked Aaron to stop people from queuing up. In the end, it took more than five hours to serve all the people in the queue. If they hadn't stopped it in advance, there would have been many more people waiting. As a result, they earned nearly two hundred.

Then, they went to the restaurant where Zac and the others worked, preparing to have dinner together. On the way there, Simone chatted casually with Bailey, “Your harp skills are superb

Even when she watched him play the harp, she felt like he was a nobleman from centuries ago. His skills were the most outstanding she had ever heard and was truly remarkable. Previously, she wanted to test the depth of his skills, and sure enough, this guy came prepared.

Chapter 285 She And Bailey Share A Surprising Connection

Bailey exuded an air of elegance, with a subtle smile playing at the corners of his lips. “My master is skilled in harp, chess, calligraphy, and painting, so I have been learning from him since I was young.”

Simone nodded, “I see. Your geomancy skills must be very advanced. I can’t discern anything from your facial features. That means your abilities are superior to mine.”

Although she was testing him, most of what she said was true. His facial features didn’t seem to be concealed, but she couldn’t see through them and could only discern a few basic things. For the most crucial aspects, she couldn’t see anything, which indicated that his abilities were likely higher than hers.

What she could see was that he, Jodie, and the others had no blood relation. In other words, he was not one of them. She had a faint feeling that he had reached the highest level of unity between man and nature as a geomancy grandmaster, and his strength was formidable.

However, achieving such a high level of unity at such a young age was extremely unlikely. There must be some secret behind this, or there might be some variables about him.

Bailey smiled faintly. “That’s not necessarily true. From your facial features, I can’t see through you, so your abilities are also very strong.”

While Simone was observing him, he was also observing Simone. To his surprise, he couldn’t see through her facial features, but her abilities were only in the innate realm.

According to reason, this kind of situation would only occur with geomancy grandmasters who had reached the level of unity between man and nature. It also indicated that something must have happened to her. Nevertheless, the more he couldn't see through her, the more it piqued his curiosity and interest in investigating.

Simone smiled. "You are too modest. Let's find an opportunity to spar another day?"

He nodded and smiled. "Sure, I have the same idea."

Simone felt that she had met a worthy opponent. Moreover, this opponent was even more challenging. The person behind the scenes had really made a move this time, sending someone like him.

What puzzled her the most was why this person had the seal of her master in his hands. So, she asked with a smile. Is your master a grandmaster of the geomancy association? I don't know it I know him. Of course, if it's inconvenient to say, just take it that I didn't ask.

Two seniors had brought her into several groups of geomancy grandmasters, and she had also recently joined the geomancy association, exchanging ideas with some grandmasters in the group

Bailey smiled. "There's nothing inconvenient about it. My master is Magnus Hart, and know him."

you

This time, she was truly surprised. "Mr. Hart is your master? If that's the case, that makes my senior?"

you

The staff of the program had asked Bailey earlier, and he had said that he was 25 years old, older than her. Magnus was her master's senior and also the vice president of the geomancy association. She hadn't expected that they would have such a connection.

With this, things were becoming more and more complicated because her master's senior was unexpectedly involved. Could it be that Bailey wasn't arranged by the one behind the scenes, and it was just a coincidence today? But her intuition told her that it wasn't that simple.

Smiling openly, Bailey said, "That's right, my junior. We do have fate. When I saw you just now, I was surprised. My master has mentioned you to me before and even showed me your photo. I thought it would be interesting to be on a variety show with you, so I agreed. And because you're my junior, that's why the seal is connected to you."

Simone understood what he meant. He should know that the seal belonged to her master. She smiled and said, "I didn't expect that there would be this connection between us. That seal, could it be that my master gave it to you?"

He smiled with his eyes. "You're clever. I've met my master's junior three times, and the last time, he gave me this seal. But when I went to pick it up, the seal fell to the ground, and I couldn't have it. So, I returned it to him, but he didn't take it back. He said to keep it for now and give it to someone who is destined for it in the future. Three years ago, I left the seal in that shop, and unexpectedly, you became its destined owner. This truly is a destined fate from heaven."

Simone said, "Is that so? That's coincidental. Her smile deepened. "I thought that you left the seal in the shop, waiting for me, the destined person."

Bailey paused for a moment and chuckled. "If you want to interpret it that way, it's also possible."

Simone changed the topic, "Is Mr. Hart in the city? I've been thinking that after the variety show ends, I'll visit him."

"Master has gone out for business and may not be back until next month," he replied

Simone smiled with a hint of regret. "Then, I'll have to miss him this time."

He laughed. "There will be plenty of opportunities in the future."

As they walked, they chatted while Aaron and Leon beside them were surprised, not expecting that the amateur guest they had found would turn out to be Simone's senior.

The audience in the live broadcast room was also very surprised. One by one, they expressed their amazement.

Someone said, "Both look so good; no wonder they're from the same sect."

After more than ten minutes, the four of them entered the restaurant. By this time, the dinner rush had passed, and Zac was diligently cleaning the tables, looking very professional while working.

Andrew was nearby, slowly moving chairs, and Jodie was wiping the tables. When they saw Simone and the others come in, Zac's handsome face lit up with a bright smile. "Simone, you guys are here."

Simone's eyes filled with a smile. "Yes, we came to have dinner with you. What about Keira? Have you finished your tasks?"

Zac answered, "I'll be done cleaning these two tables soon, and Keira is cleaning up in the kitchen. She'll be done soon, too. You guys go ahead and order in the private room, and we'll join you shortly."

Simone offered, "Do you need any help?"

Zac smiled and replied, "No need, you've worked hard all afternoon doing makeup for others; now take a good rest." He had heard from the customers who came to eat that Simone was earning money by doing makeup for others on another street.

Those people kept recommending her to other customers, saying that Simone was incredibly efficient at doing makeup; she could finish one person in about ten minutes and even help with styling. Fast and skilled, she was just as good as professional makeup artists.

While he felt proud, he also felt a bit concerned. Simone was fast and skilled at doing makeup, but she never took a break. Doing makeup for so many people for over five hours, she must be exhausted.

Simone sensed Zac's concern in his words and was touched, smiling. "Now that you mention it, I am a bit tired. We'll wait for you in the private room."

"Okay." Zac nodded and considerately led the way to the private room.

Aaron and Leon, who were walking behind, felt a bit uneasy witnessing this scene. Zac was good at being attentive. At the same time, they couldn't help but feel regretful. Seeing Simone doing makeup and styling for others seemed so effortless that they didn't consider how tiring it could be. So, they didn't say anything thoughtful, and now Zac had taken the lead. What a pity.

Bailey raised an eyebrow as he observed the two frustrated individuals. He glanced up and noticed that Simone was engaging in a lively conversation with Zac.

He observed that the way she talked to this person was completely different from her interactions with them.

She radiated a pleasant aura.

He looked closer and realized that Zac was completely captivated by Simone.

The way Zac gazed at Simone suggested he wanted to be by her side at all times.

There was a strong possibility that he had ulterior motives toward Simone.

After entering the private room, Zac excused himself to continue tidying up.

Andrew from outside appeared displeased.

Simone and Aaron entered the room without even acknowledging him.

She had grown distant toward him and remained silent.

However, Aaron's behavior was going too far.

Jodie lowered her head to wipe the table, her eyes filled with resentment.

Earlier, she had asked Zac for help in lifting a table, but he ignored her.

Now that Simone had arrived, he immediately showered her with attention.

As the favored young master of the Turner Family, why did he go out of his way for Simone? What had she done to deserve it? It left a bitter taste in Jodie's mouth.

She had been working in the restaurant for hours.

Her back was sore, and her waist ached.

Yet, Zac had previously made sarcastic remarks, claiming they weren't doing a good job.

During their break, he even mocked them, accusing them of intentionally slacking off. He told them that if they didn't want to work properly, they shouldn't do it at all, as they didn't deserve their wages.

He didn't even consider that she would be exhausted from working non-stop.

Simone sat there, helping with makeup, simply moving her hands, yet Zac was considerate enough to let her rest.

Jodie was clearly much more tired than Simone. He was nothing but a hypocrite.

At the same time, although she didn't want to admit it, she felt envy, jealousy, and hatred towards Simone. She hadn't realized before that Simone could make someone like Zac, who had such a bad temper, lower himself and fawn over her.

Simone definitely had some tricks up her sleeve.

In the private room, Leon proactively handed the menu to Simone, saying, "Take a look and decide what you want to eat."

Simone's expression turned cold and indifferent, and she didn't take the menu. "We'll order when the others arrive."

Then, she took out her phone and started chatting with Tina in the group chat.

Tina and the other three were on their way.

Instead of performing, the four of them had become extras.

There was a street in Cubilis specifically designated for filming traditional attire dramas.

Since they couldn't find other jobs, they decided to become extras.

Each of them earned 45 dollars.

So, when Zac invited them for a meal in the group chat, they agreed and rushed over.

Leon felt a strong sense of bitterness in his heart when he saw Simone's attitude.

Zac had asked her to order food, and she gladly agreed, but now that he was here, her attitude had changed.

“Well. Let’s wait for them,” she said with a forced smile.

Simone didn’t respond, clearly uninterested in talking to him.

Aaron saw that Leon had been defeated and wisely chose not to initiate any further conversation.

After sending a message to Tina, Simone put her phone down. She turned to Bailey, who was sitting next to her, and asked, “Will you be staying at the inn with us tonight?”

Bailey nodded and replied, “Yes. The production team informed me that I’ll be joining all of you for next week.”

Simone asked, “Since you’ve settled in Cubilis, you must be familiar with it, right?”

He replied. “Yes. I’ve been living here since I was a child, so I know it very well.”

She smiled and asked again, “Besides what is mentioned online, are there any interesting places or activities that tourists aren’t aware of?” She wanted to find an opportunity to interact with Bailey more, to observe and test him.

After thinking for a moment, he said, “There is a night market specifically for geomancy masters in the evening. If you’re interested, I can take you there.”

“But photography and filming aren’t allowed, so you won’t be able to livestream it.”

Simone had no prior knowledge of this. Since Bailey had brought it up, he must have already planned to take them there. She expressed her interest, saying, “Let’s go check it out after the livestream ends.”

He nodded and said, “Sure. I’ll take you there.”

Simone asked again, “Are there any money-making activities in Cubilis? Like competitions or something?”

Bailey, being familiar with the ancient city, answered without hesitation. “There is a polo competition the day after tomorrow, and even tourists can participate. The top three teams will be rewarded with silver coins by Cubilis. In addition to cash, gold and silver can also be used as currency in the shops of Cubilis.”

“You can use silver coins in all the shops, but if you find it troublesome, you can also exchange them for cash at the bank.”

He added, “Many tourists actually go to the bank to exchange cash for silver coins.”

“It is said that this makes them feel more immersed in Cubilis.”

I prefer using gold and silver as currency, and I’m more accustomed to it.”

Simone laughed and said, “I see.”

Do you know how to play polo? How about we form a team and give it a try?”
Polo was an ancient sport where players on horseback used a stick to hit a ball.

She used to enjoy playing it in ancient times and was quite skilled.

Bailey replied, “I know how to play.”

“The competition here is in groups of six, but only if you truly know how to play. Otherwise, you won’t be allowed to participate.”

“After all, there can be dangers involved.

“If we can’t gather enough people, we can join other teams to play.”

“Of course. It would be best if we can form a complete team.” He looked at Aaron and Leon and asked. “Can you two play?”

Both of them shook their heads helplessly. “No. We can’t.”

They actually wanted to so they could play with Simone, but just then, Zac walked in with a smile and said, “I know how to play this. Count me in.”

He loved horseback riding and playing polo and would often engage in the sport.

Apart from him, Keira, Jodie, and Andrew also walked in.

Keira smiled and said, “Although I don’t know how to play, I can support you as a cheerleader.”

Bailey smiled and replied, “That sounds good.” Then, he turned to Jodie and asked, “What about you two?”

Jodie had a sweet smile on her face and said, “I can play. When I was studying abroad, Andrew used to take me to play often.”

She never expected that she would learn polo just to fit into that social circle, but now she could put it to use. Especially with this distinguished guest, the more she looked at him, the more attractive he became.

His appearance and demeanor were extraordinary as if he were a nobleman from ancient times.

She sensed a mysterious aura around him, which was particularly captivating. It was the first time she had encountered a man with such charisma, and it made her heart flutter.

Once she had this feeling, she wanted to hold onto it.

That was how she felt about Zac. It also meant that as long as she held onto him, her luck would multiply.

So, she definitely wanted to participate.

Her eyes flickered, and this might even become a crucial turning point for her to leave her past behind.

She had to perform well and surpass Simone.

Andrew also chimed in, "I can play, too. Count me in."

When he was studying abroad, he had a few friends in the circle who enjoyed playing polo, and he would often join them.

This was his area of expertise and a great way to showcase himself.

It was much better than serving dishes and being ridiculed by Zac.

He wanted to surpass Zac and turn the tables on him.

Bailey smiled and said. "In that case, we now have five people."

At that moment, another group of people entered the room.

Simone introduced the new guest, Bailey, to them. Then, she asked Tina and the others. "Can you play polo?"

Tina raised her hand and said, "I can."

She had received training in this sport before. She used to wonder why she had to learn it.

Now, she realized it was for this moment. She was even more amazed.

She had been taught polo, but that was ten years ago.

Did the people behind the scenes already know that they would come to Cubilis? If that was the case, it would be terrifying.

In this group, Tina knew how to play polo, while Ethan, Eric, and Dylan did not.

However, the three of them were all excited and said that they would go and cheer for them.

Bailey smiled and said, "Then, it just so happens that we have six people and can form a team."

"If we can make it to first place, according to the exchange rate at the bank, we can get a prize of thirty thousand yuan."

"This way, if the three of us form a team, each team can get 5 thousand."

Simone smiled and said, "Then, let's strive for first place."

Although playing polo with Jodie and Andrew felt a bit awkward.

But it was a good opportunity to test them.

And she had a feeling that Bailey was leading them.

If she wanted to know his intentions, she had to take risks.

This time, everyone also ordered a dish for themselves.

They ate while talking about the interesting things they saw in Cubilis today.

Simone also told everyone about some fun things she heard from the girls while doing makeup today.

At the same time, she observed Bailey.

She noticed that since the food was served and they started eating with a fork and spoon, he hadn't said a word.

His table manners are very good, and he carries himself with a noble elegance.

He must be used to the saying “eat without speaking, sleep without talking.”

It was different from the current wealthy families.

Instead, it resembled the dining style of the noble sons she had seen in ancient times.

His post-meal habits were also similar.

“This is the true embodiment of immortality. I wonder if Jojo sitting at the same table is feeling awkward.”

“If she’s not awkward, then she’s making others feel awkward.”

“Honey, you truly live up to being my wife’s senior. You’ve perfectly captured this appearance and temperament.”

“Honey, debut right here and now.”

“I don’t know if Zachy feels any pressure.”

“Zachy, go for it. Although Mr. Shawn is good-looking, we still have high hopes for you.”

“It’s a pity I can’t watch Mr. Shawn at night. I’ll take my wife and go to the night market for a livestream.”

“I’m in Cubilis, too. I’ll go and see, and then I’ll type and livestream their situation for you.”

“Sis, keep an eye out and charge ahead.”

“Sis, we’re counting on you.”

Without the interference of Andrew and Jodie’s fans, the live chat in the live stream room. was lively.

After Simone and the others finished eating, the boss gave them a discount.

After paying the bill, they went to find an inn.

Because they had Bailey, who was familiar with Cubilis, they were able to find an inn with a good environment and reasonable prices.

A room only cost 30 dollars, so Simone directly booked four rooms.

After giving money for meals to the other two groups, they had just enough money for each person to stay in one room.

The three groups of people stayed in the same inn.

The night market didn’t start until 10 p.m., so it was still early at around 8 p.m.

There was a dedicated tea room on the first floor of the inn, so the group went there to have tea first.

Simone sat down first.

Zac squeezed through and wanted to sit next to Simone while Aaron sat on her left.

Bailey was also quick and sat down on Simone's right, just a step ahead of Leon.

Aaron and Leon were speechless.

They couldn't sit together, so they were about to sit in the two empty seats next to Bailey.

They instinctively didn't want to sit next to Zac.

But just as they were about to take a step, Jodie sat down next to Bailey.

Andrew naturally sat next to Jodie out of habit.

Aaron and Leon now wanted to stay away from these two even more.

So, with a stiff scalp, they walked over and sat in the empty seats next to Zac.

Then, they received a disdainful look from Zac.

Aaron couldn't help but ask, "Shouldn't you sit in your group's seat?" Zac raised an eyebrow and bluntly said, "You're really nosy. I want to sit next to Simone. Do you have a problem with that?" Aaron choked, "I do. I think people from the same group should sit together."

That way, if he sat next to Simone, he could also try to be attentive like Zac.

I can help Simone pour tea and such.

Zac sneered. "Even if you have a problem, it's useless. I won't listen anyway."

Aaron was speechless. This guy is really unbearable.

Simone spoke up to help Zac. “We’re just here to drink tea and chat. It doesn’t matter how we sit.”

She bluntly expressed her disdain. “Besides, I don’t want to sit with you guys either.”

At this moment, Andrew sneered, “You two deserve it.”

He shamelessly moved closer to Simone, but she completely ignored them.

Aaron realized that Andrew was becoming more and more unlikable.

He pursed his lips. “You don’t deserve it. I’ll see if you can still laugh in a couple of days.”

He had a feeling that Andrew was going to have a rough time these days.

After all, he had been hanging out with the troublemaker, Jodie.

Andrew now found Aaron very displeasing. “I’m sure I can still laugh.”

In a sarcastic tone, Simone ridiculed them, saying, “It’s actually you guys who are the lap dogs. Everyone despises you.”

In the recording, Simone cursed their whole family as lapdogs of Jo.

But from what he saw, it was now Aaron and Leon who were her lap dogs.

They didn't mind lowering their status, but he found it embarrassing to watch them.

Their faces turned dark upon hearing this.

Aaron sneered, "I'm glad. I'm willing."

"You're just talking big now, but when you're in pain, it'll be too late for you to be a lapdog."

With Andrew's annoying temper, Simone would definitely not care when he was in trouble.

Now, they even dared to despise and look down on them, attempting to get close to Simone.

He was waiting to see when Andrew would actively seek Simone's favor.

Leon sneered, "He's not even deserving

They couldn't care less about being sycophants or anything. Simone didn't need them.

Aaron and Leon were speechless. Andrew is an idiot.

Zac just insulted them together, and he actually followed suit.

Andrew teased Aaron and Leon and no longer wanted to talk to him.

Aaron changed the subject.

He also remembered a question. “Master Shawn is taking us to the night market later. What should we do if we see something we want?” Since their phones were taken away, they had not money to buy things.

Others also asked, “Yeah. What should we do if we want to buy something?” Everyone looked at Jonah sitting in the corner.

Jonah thought for a moment and said, “Well. I’ll bring my assistant with you when the time comes.

“If you find something you like, our program team will pay for it.”

“After the variety show ends, you can reimburse the program team.”

They couldn’t get their phones back.

Simone smiled and said, “That’s a good idea.”

“We’ll trouble you, Jonah.”

He waved his hand. “No trouble.”

He was also curious and wanted to go and see.

After hearing about the night market from Bailey during the day, he specifically asked his assistant to inquire about this geomancy night market.

Only then did he know that someone had to bring you in. Otherwise, not only would you not find it, but they also wouldn't let you in.

After listening to the conversation between a few people, Andrew asked Aaron. "Why do call him Master Shawn?" Aaron replied, "We seemed to have forgotten to introduce him. before. Our new guest in the group is a geomancy master."

"So, I call him Master Shawn."

Simone had a thought and added, "That's right. He is a very powerful geomancy master, and he is also my senior."

She really wanted to see how he would choose.

Simone hadn't introduced this to everyone before.

It was unexpected that she had this relationship with the new guest.

Sure enough, Andrew's eyes lit up.

He looked at Bailey and said, “Master Shawn, can you help me take a look? I know that geomancy masters like you have rules, and fortune-telling and physiognomy require compensation.”

“After the variety show ends, I will compensate you.”

He was driven to the brink of collapse by the bad luck he had before.

Now that he was wearing the bracelet Jo gave him, things were better, but he still hoped to solve everything once and for all.

If Simone hadn’t helped him, he would have found another powerful geomancy master in front of her.

This person was Simone’s senior and was praised by her, so he must be very capable.

After hearing Andrew’s words, Jodie, sitting next to him, tightened her heart.

She was cursed in her heart for being nosy.

Why ask these questions during a live broadcast? Couldn’t he find Bailey privately for physiognomy? Is Bailey really capable?

She also thought about the current situation of the live broadcast.

Even if the other party noticed something, they probably wouldn’t say it. Bailey was also surprised that a guest asked him for help with physiognomy.

After thinking for a moment, he asked Jonah. “Since we are living now, can I help?” Jonah couldn’t be happier, as he wanted to generate some buzz.

He smiled and said, “Of course.”

“There are still many live rooms dedicated to physiognomy, so it’s not against the rules.”

In other words, go ahead and do it.

Andrew also said, "Master Shawn, don't worry. There's absolutely no problem."

Bailey smiled faintly. "As long as there's no problem."

"Since we are on a variety show together, it can be considered fate."

"I'll take a look for you."

"But my fee for physiognomy is very high, 750 thousand for one reading."

"If you want to resolve it, there will be an additional charge."

He asked, "Are you sure you want me to take a look?" This surprised many people present.

Is physiognomy really that expensive? It's a bit scary.

Simone added, "With his abilities, this price is within the reasonable range in the geomancy circle."

If he really reached the Divine state, even if it was three million per reading, there would still be plenty of wealthy and influential people willing to pay him.

And it also depended on whether he was willing or not.

Bailey nodded. "When I used to do readings for others, the starting price was always this."

Andrew was stunned for a moment. "If it's for resolving, how much would it cost?" Bailey replied, "It depends on the situation, but it won't be less than 750 thousand."

He wouldn't bother for anything less than 750 thousand.

And at his level, he had long been indifferent to worldly wealth.

Many wealthy people came to him with money, and he would refuse most of them based on his mood.

Now, because he participated in this variety show and this person took the initiative to ask, he decided to play along.

After hearing this price, Andrew, although feeling it was expensive, became even more convinced of Bailey's true abilities.

Simone had sold talismans to Titus for 750 thousand each.

Since he wanted to spend 750 thousand, she wouldn't sell it to him. Therefore, he said to Bailey, "No problem. After the variety show ends, I will reward you, and you can take a look Bailey's gaze fell on Andrew's face.

Everyone also looked at the two of them.

The audience in the live room also watched with great curiosity, and no one sent any live chat messages.

With just a careful glance at Andrew, Bailey already knew everything.

"Everyone knows about your background."

"You had a smooth life for over twenty years before, so I won't mention it."

He continued, "The turning point in your career starts when you seize an opportunity from someone else."

"You do it before the other person, so you succeed."

"After that, you have a successful career and gain fame and fortune."

Hearing this, Andrew became even more convinced of Bailey.

After entering the industry, he followed Jo's advice and bought a script before another director did.

It turned out to be a huge success.

This laid the foundation for him to become the youngest and most promising director in the country.

Only he and Jo knew about this.

Jodie's heart skipped a beat. This person really had some skills.

She wondered if he would be able to see through her luck as well.

Probably not. Seeing that Andrew didn't refute, everyone understood that Bailey was accurate.

At the same time, their opinion of Andrew's character sank even lower.

Their curiosity was piqued, and they were eager to hear more.

He continued, "Have you had a string of bad luck recently? Choking on water, choking on food, and even falling while walking."

With his abilities, she expected him to see it, too.

She wondered if he would reveal it.

He said to Andrew, “Because you gave away one-third of your luck.”

He glanced at Jodie and added, “Didn’t give your luck to her?”

“She has suffered a great loss of luck before, so she asks you for some luck, and you agree.”

“There is a connection between the two of you, so after you agree, the luck is transferred to her.”

He pointed to the bracelet on Andrew’s wrist and said, “The reason you haven’t had any luck in the past few days is because of this mystical tool.”

Andrew looked at him in shock and said, “You’re truly amazing.”

This also meant that he admitted to giving his luck to Jodie.

Jodie’s face stiffened, feeling extremely uncomfortable.

In her mind, she cursed Andrew.

bad

He casually revealed and admitted it. How would everyone look at her? So, she said in shock, “Ah. Is it really possible? I heard from a friend before that if you’re unlucky, you can ask someone close to you to borrow some luck.”

“That way, you won’t be so unlucky.”

She made a surprised expression again. “But he didn’t tell me that after borrowing it, the borrower would have bad luck.”

Chapter 289 It's Really Hard To Accept

Jodie felt the need to step forward and explain herself.

Otherwise, others might fear that she was borrowing something and would be afraid to be around her.

She also didn't want Andrew to know that she knew something bad would happen to him after she borrowed his luck.

And she didn't want Zac and Bailey to misunderstand her.

Aaron saw Jodie's surprised look and thought she was really good at pretending.

No wonder she wanted to enter the entertainment industry. Otherwise, her acting skills would go to waste.

He didn't know if others believed it or not.

But he definitely didn't believe it. She didn't know that something bad would happen to Andrew after borrowing his luck.

Zac clearly didn't believe it either. "Your words make me feel like you're trying to cover up something."

"You're feeling guilty. That's why you're in such a hurry to explain."

Simone was about to speak, but she remained silent because Zac said everything she wanted to say.

Jodie was speechless. Why is it Zac again? Why does he always jump out and oppose her? He doesn't speak, but no one treats him like a mute.

She looked aggrieved. "I didn't. I really didn't know before."

Zac chuckled, "Well. I don't believe it anyway. I guess most of the people here don't believe it either."

He looked meaningfully at Andrew. "Now, only fools would believe this."

Andrew was also speechless. Why is this person looking at him like that? He shouldn't have any doubts in his heart, so it must be fake.

But he really didn't want to think badly of Jo.

He immediately changed the subject and asked Bailey. "Master Shawn, can you help resolve it Bailey raised an eyebrow. "Do you really want to resolve it?" Andrew said, "Of course. I don't want to have bad luck anymore."

Bailey said meaningfully, "Resolving this won't be easy."

Andrew frowned. "Is it difficult to resolve?" He asked, "So if I wear this mystical tool, will I be able to avoid further bad luck?" If wearing it all the time could prevent bad luck, then it would be difficult to resolve, but he would accept it.

Simone rarely gave Sc*mbag No. 4 a thumbs up. Finally, she asked the right question.

But this made Jodie's expression change slightly.

She naturally knew how long this bracelet could last and what would happen after it became ineffective.

She looked up at Bailey, her eyes pleading.

She begged him not to say it in front of everyone and on the live broadcast.

And she couldn't let Andrew know.

Otherwise, would he still believe her afterward? She didn't want Andrew to become like Titus, Luca, and Aaron.

Bailey naturally saw the plea in Jodie's eyes. However, he ignored it.

He chuckled and looked at Andrew. “Do you really think this mystical tool can help you for at lifetime? If that’s the case, wouldn’t anyone be able to borrow luck or lend their luck to others?”

Andrew’s heart tightened, and he couldn’t help but ask, “Master Shawn, are you saying that this mystical tool cannot remain effective indefinitely?” He nodded. “That’s right.”

“Not only can it not remain effective indefinitely, but it will also bring you even more misfortune for a while.”

Andrew was shocked. “Ah. Why? But ever since I started wearing it, I haven’t been as unlucky recently. Bailey said, “That’s because this artifact temporarily suppresses your misfortune.”

“This artifact can suppress your misfortune for a month.”

“After a month, it becomes useless.”

“And during this month, the misfortune that was suppressed will rebound and return to you.”

“So, your misfortune will double or even multiply several times.”

He countered, “If that’s the case, wouldn’t you be even more unlucky?” Andrew’s face. changed. “Will it be like that?” He really didn’t know, and he didn’t expect it to be like this.

He had previously treated this bracelet as a treasure, but now he felt a bit uneasy about it.

Bailey replied, "Everything in the world has its destiny."

"You have lent your luck to your sister, so naturally, you have lost it."

"It's impossible to rely on external objects to sustain it."

He countered again, "If that's possible, why didn't she use this bracelet to suppress her misfortune instead of borrowing luck from you?" Andrew was starting to lose his mind a little. "Are you saying that if I lend out one-third of my luck, no matter what external object I use, I will always be unlucky in the future?" Bailey nodded. "Yes."

"To be precise, it won't always be as unlucky as it is now."

"In the next twenty or thirty years, you will be somewhat less unlucky than before wearing the bracelet."

"After that, it will improve a bit."

Andrew was speechless. It had only been twenty days before, and he was already on the verge of a breakdown.

If he were to be this unlucky for the next twenty or thirty years, he would truly go insane..

He couldn't help but ask, "What will happen if I become even more unlucky after not wearing the bracelet?" Bailey looked up and glanced at Andrew's face.

"Based on your fortune reading, after the bracelet becomes ineffective, you will experience a serious car accident, adding insult to injury."

"You will have to lie in bed for at least two to three months before being able to get up."

"In the hospital, you will also encounter a nurse accidentally slipping and spilling hot water from a cup onto your body."

"You might accidentally bump into sharp objects and get a head injury when you go to the bathroom, causing bloodshed,"

"You choke on water, and choking on food is a daily occurrence for you."

“Well. You won’t die, but you’ll experience a combination of various misfortunes that will you half-dead and barely alive.”

“Wearing a bracelet to suppress bad luck for a month usually results in three to four times the rebound effect”

“In other words, that kind of extremely unlucky state will take three to four months to improve.”

Andrew remained silent. His scalp was tingling as he listened.

Others couldn’t help but look at Andrew with sympathy.

This poor guy was in a terrible state.

But it seemed like he deserved it since he willingly lent his luck to Jodie..

Aaron, as well as Luca and Titus, who were watching the livestream, felt extremely fortunate that they hadn’t fallen for it before.

They had experienced that kind of misfortune, which could drive a person crazy.

Andrew looked at Simone with disbelief.

He didn’t know whether to believe Bailey’s words or not.

Simone raised an eyebrow. “He’s completely accurate. It didn’t work on me either.”

He possessed remarkable abilities, enabling him to foresee all the misfortunes that would befall Sc*mbag No. 4.

What surprised her was that he actually divulged everything in front of everyone.

He exposed Jodie's lies and revealed the truth about the bracelet's rebound effect.

In doing so, he thrust Jodie into the spotlight.

He didn't know Jodie, or perhaps he didn't care about her, which was why he truthfully informed Sc'mbag No. 4.

Or was he intentionally trying to confuse her by betraying Jodie in front of her? She couldn't be certain at the moment.

Andrew was familiar with Simone's personality. If it was true, then it was. If it wasn't, then it wasn't.

If that was the case, it meant he was truly going to be unlucky.

He couldn't help but gaze at Jodie and say, "Jo, when you gave me this bracelet, you didn't mention this."

You say it is my lucky charm and that you don't want to see me unlucky, so you give it to me

"After wearing it, I wouldn't experience any more misfortune."

"Now tell me. Why does this thing only work for a month?"

The problem is, after a month, I'll encounter even more misfortune."

He had personally experienced that kind of misfortune, and just the thought of it frightened him.

Not to mention the fact that he would face even greater misfortune, which would practically ruin his life.

Was Jo playing a trick on him before? He found it hard to accept this reality. Therefore, he wanted to hear her explanation.

53

Chapter 290 Bullying People Shouldn't Be Done Like This

Jodie never expected that Bailey could see through everything.

She pleaded with him, but he still blurted it out in front of everyone.

She was furious.

Why does everyone who has a connection with Simone have to target me? Simone must have said many bad things about me to Bailey.

They were senior and junior siblings.

She refused to believe that Simone and Bailey had just met.

Why would Bailey help Simone target her the first time they met? She couldn't help but think that he was stating the facts.

She was panicking and didn't know what to do when Andrew asked her.

This meant that Andrew still wanted to believe her, which relieved her.

So, she looked at him with surprise and innocence in her eyes.

"Andrew, I didn't know it would turn out like this."

"My friend didn't tell me any of this."

"Look. I've been wearing this bracelet on my hand all along."

"I used it to relieve the pain in my whole body."

"I thought it was effective, so I gave it to you."

“If it isn’t good, how could I wear it daily?” Andrew found her reasoning sound.

He did see Jo wearing that bracelet all the time.

If she knew about the rebound issue, why would she wear it for so long?

He felt like he had found an excuse for her.

With anger on his face, he asked, “Who told you all these things? After the variety show ends, we’ll find her and settle the score.”

“You are deceived by that person.”

As soon as these words were spoken, everyone looked at him with a look that said, “You’re completely fooled.”

Aaron was speechless. Did Jodie deceive his younger brother?

He voluntarily defended Jodie.

He didn’t want to believe that Jodie had fooled him. Zac also had no words. “Whether she is deceived or not is uncertain.”

“But you want to believe that she is deceived.”

“Is it really okay for you to deceive yourself like this?” Andrew was already looking for reasons to console himself.

When he heard Zac’s words, he glared at him and said, “I’m willing to do so. What’s it to you?” Zac raised his hand in a gesture of surrender. “Indeed. It’s none of my business. If you’re willing, then continue being a fool.”

He couldn’t stand hearing the truth from others. It was his fault if he continued to be unlucky.

Simone took a sip of tea and said, "You can never wake up someone pretending to be asleep."

That's how sc*mdogs are.

He would instead deceive himself than believe that he had been deceived and harmed by his beloved sister for over a decade.

Of course. This was not enough to make his situation worse.

Jodie felt extremely depressed as she looked at Simone and said, "You don't need to meddle in my relationship with Andrew."

"I know you've always been unhappy because my brothers dote on me more."

"Andrew and I have been together for over ten years, so he naturally knows I would never harm him.

"A friend also deceived me. Otherwise, I would never have made a joke and told him to borrow some luck.

"I would never watch him suffer"

As she defended herself, she also tried to clear her name.

Simone raised an eyebrow and said, "Borrowing luck is not that simple. You can't just make a soke and say. I end me your luck, and expect it to work if the other person agrees

25

Otherwise, between family and friends, anyone could pretend to joke and borrow luck Wouldn't that be chaotic?" "Among the people sitting here, there is only one fool"

Andrew was speechless. In that case, he might as well point fingers at him directly.

He couldn't help but ask, "So, to borrow luck, are there other conditions?" That day, he thought Jo was joking.

At that time, he genuinely believed it wouldn't hurt to lend some luck to his beloved sister, even if it was true.

Little did he know that lending luck would lead to such misfortune.

If he had to choose now, he definitely would disagree again.

However, according to Simone, borrowing luck was more complex.

Simone sighed. "What do you think? Borrow some luck from others and see if it works, then you'll know."

Andrew was starting to believe a little, but it was still difficult for him to accept it.

He looked at Aaron and said, "Aaron, can you lend me some of your luck?" Aaron remained silent. Dan it. Why did he have to be the scapegoat? "Andrew, do I owe you something?" This b*stard had previously stolen his talisman, not only causing him to have a few unlucky days but also wasting 750 thousand.

Andrew said, "Simone said it won't work without specific conditions, right?" "I just want to give it a try."

He was desperate to know if Jodie had deceived him.

Seeing him like this, Aaron also guessed his thoughts.

He had been the same before, not wanting to think of Jodie as such a dishonest person.

He looked at Simone and asked, "Can we try?" He didn't dare to do such a thing so easily.

What would he do if he tried it and his brother borrowed his luck? So, he had to ask Simone.

Simone's personality was not like Jodie's. If it could work, she would allow it. If it couldn't, she wouldn't deceive anyone.

Simone nodded at him and said, "There are no specific conditions between you and him for borrowing luck, so feel free to try."

Andrew asked, "Why must I take off the bracelet and take a few steps before borrowing luck?" Simone glared at him and said, "Why do you talk so much? How can we test it if you don't do it this way?" Andrew felt wronged by Simone's glare and said, "Fine. I'll do it."

But Jodie was anxious.

She couldn't let Andrew try it. Otherwise, she would be exposed.

But how could she stop it? Just as Andrew reached out to remove the bracelet, Jodie suddenly had an idea.

She was already anxious, her face turning pale. She raised her hand to support her forehead and pretended to stand up but accidentally fainted.

Little did she know, just as she was about to support her forehead, Zac said, "Jojo, are you pretending to faint to stop Andrew?" He had been keeping an eye on this little white flower.

She couldn't let the other party ruin Simone's plan.

Jodie was speechless. For the first time, she felt the urge to curse Zac.

She even felt like crying. Why did this jerk always single her out? Bullying someone shouldn't be done in this manner.

As a result, her plan to pretend to faint failed.

She couldn't hold back and glared at Zac. "I'm not."

Then, her eyes welled up with tears, and she whimpered softly, "Why do you always assist Simone in bullying me? What have I done to you?" Zac looked innocent. "I was just casually mentioning it. Why are you so upset?" Simone remarked, "Looks like she's feeling guilty."

She also noticed that Jodie had intended to feign fainting to stop them.

Zac was indeed skilled at identifying pretenders. It was impressive.

Jodie bit her lip and said, "You two are collaborating to isolate and bully me. I can't argue with you."

Simone smiled and said, "If you can't argue, sit back and watch the outcome."

The message was clear. Whether they were joining forces to bully her or she was the one who harmed Andrew, the truth would be revealed not through words but through facts.
