

Chapter 880 Let Me Deal With It!

The next morning, Julie headed to the Red Murray Group to finalize the contract.

This time, everything went off without a hitch.

Only after the contract was signed did Julie head over to Williams Group, ready to start her new role.

However, Julie was feeling a bit anxious. After some thought, she decided to call Patty.

Patty was shocked to learn about Julie's new position as marketing director at Williams Group, but she quickly agreed to come over.

Not long after, Patty got there.

"Julie, is what you told me over the phone really happening?"

Julie responded with a grin, "Patty, I'm not kidding. It's the truth!"

Patty couldn't hide her delight. After all, her brother Lenny had been interested in Julie, and Julie's new role as marketing director at the Williams Group now could only be beneficial for her.

As they walked towards the Williams Group building, Patty and Julie chatted about workplace rules.

Upon reaching the front desk, Julie inquired, "Hello, could you please tell me where the marketing department is located?"

The receptionist looked up, and when she saw Julie, her demeanor changed to an indifferent one. She then asked nonchalantly, "Why are you here?"

Patty quickly interjected, "This is my friend. She's the new marketing director of your company!"

The receptionist was taken aback, then scoffed, "A new marketing director? We've had no such update! Where did you two come from?"

Julie's expression turned cold as she heard this. She glanced at the Red Murray Group contract in her bag and murmured to herself, "Could it be that Niko and his son haven't kept their word? Niko! What a bastard. If this is some sort of game, I'll rip up this contract! Let everything fall apart if it must!"

As Julie's mood soured, Doyle unexpectedly showed up. Spotting Julie, he greeted her with a casual tone. "Julie, you're here quite early!"

When she saw Doyle, Julie couldn't hold back her anger and confronted him, saying, "Doyle, why haven't you and Niko followed through on your promise from last night? I just spoke with the receptionist, and she's unaware of any changes in the marketing department's leadership!"

Unfazed, Doyle gave a smile and replied, "Julie, the situation is a bit complex. Come on, let me show you around in the marketing department first."

Julie and Patty exchanged glances, feeling they had no other option but to go along with Doyle.

Once they reached the marketing department, Doyle arranged an office for Julie and brought in Chiquita Welch, the former marketing director, to serve as Julie's assistant.

As Chiquita approached, Doyle sneered and muttered to himself, "Julie, Julie, just wait and see! Do you really think it's that simple to become the marketing director of the Williams family group? I'll only grant you the title of marketing director, but you'll have no real authority. You'll see, Chiquita will make sure you're merely a figurehead here."

Soon after, Chiquita led the staff of the marketing department to meet Julie.

Out of courtesy, Julie extended her hand to Chiquita for a handshake. "Hello..."

With a sneer, Chiquita crossed her arms over her chest and said, "So, you're the new director?"

Julie's hand remained suspended mid-air, and an awkward feeling washed over her.

Following Chiquita's dismissive remark, the employees behind her echoed, "Miss Welch, our loyalty is to you! Even if you're her assistant, you're the true director in our eyes!"

Julie's face turned livid, and her body shook with fury.

She hadn't anticipated Chiquita displaying such dominance right before her.

Meanwhile, Doyle subtly signaled to Chiquita.

Catching his cue, Chiquita quickly snatched Julie's bag, extracted the contract Julie had signed with the Red Murray Group, and passed it to Doyle.

Having obtained the document he coveted, Doyle was visibly thrilled. He waved the contract triumphantly and mocked Julie.

"Julie, now that I have the contract, you needn't worry about handing it over. Just settle in here as the marketing director!"

Julie's expression grew dark. She inhaled deeply, trying to steady her emotions, and said firmly, "Doyle, you and your father agreed just yesterday to give me ten million. We have it in writing. If you think of withdrawing this deal, I'll take legal action with this contract as my evidence! Also, if you dare to withdraw, I'll make my way to the Red Murray Group and inform Mr. Murray of my decision to leave the Williams Group. The worst that could happen is that it spells disaster for all of us!"

Doyle, however, didn't seem concerned. He pulled out the contract they had signed the previous night and scoffed, "Julie, you are such a fool! The contract states that I'll pay you only after the deal with the Red Murray Group is finalized. Also, if you leave the Williams family group while the contract is active, you'll be the one breaking the agreement!"

Hearing Doyle's words, Julie's face turned pale. She grabbed the contract and, to her dismay, found Doyle's claims were true.

Tears started to stream down Julie's cheeks.

Feeling sympathetic towards Julie, Patty leaned in and whispered a suggestion.

"Julie, maybe you should reach out to Newell and Baxter first. Let's think this through!"

Julie, still in shock, nodded and dialed the number.

Meanwhile, in the Nightingale Villa Area, Yesenia was quick to act when she received Julie's call. She hurriedly assembled everyone before picking up the phone. "Julie, how's everything going with you?"

Overwhelmed by her emotions, Julie couldn't hold back her tears as she recounted the recent events.

Hearing Julie's ordeal, Yesenia and the others were engulfed in rage.

Unable to contain her anger, Yesenia exclaimed, "I always suspected Niko's intentions weren't pure! They're clearly fooling us! No! This can't be ignored! Julie, stay strong! If it comes to it, we'll sever ties with Niko and his son, even if it means we all face losses!"

Newell and his son, feeling somewhat defeated, remarked, "But how can we possibly outsmart Niko and his family? You need to calm down."

A wave of disappointment washed over Yesenia when she heard this. She then turned her attention to Liam, who had been silent throughout. A new surge of anger took hold of her as she approached him, ready to vent her frustration.

"Liam! This mess is all your fault, you fool! You're the one who made Julie work in the Williams Group! And what has she gained from it, other than being mistreated?"

In fact, Liam hadn't expected that Niko and his son would be so shameless.

After hearing Yesenia's harsh words, Liam's eyes turned cold and he scolded, "Enough! I will handle the situation."

With those firm words, Liam left the house, his demeanor exuding an intense coldness.

His resolute declaration left Yesenia and the others feeling a mix of awe and apprehension.