

Chapter 886 The Relationship Between Mr. Murray And Lia...

Niko took out his bank card, only for Liam to snatch it with a scoff.

Liam said, "Niko, if you and your son stuck to the agreement, you wouldn't have found yourselves in this situation. Thanks to Mr. Murray, Julie got even with you. Mr. Murray, I appreciate your intervention. Please consider giving Pearl Company another chance."

Upon hearing Liam's words, Tristan muttered to himself, "Seems Liam's quite pleased with how I handled things this time! Establishing a friendship with him could greatly benefit my company."

Quickly, he smiled and addressed Liam, "You're welcome, Mr. Hoffman. I had intended to offer Pearl Company a contract from the start. Julie, let's finalize that contract now! Also, as a gesture, I'd like to offer the twenty million compensation Niko needs to pay to Julie. After all, she's the victim here."

Julie's heart brimmed with joy upon hearing this.

The prospect of Mr. Murray granting her another chance caught her off guard.

"Thank you, Mr. Murray!" Julie nodded warmly as she expressed her gratitude.

Subsequently, Julie swiftly printed out a new contract and signed it with Tristan right away.

After signing the contract, a soft smile graced Tristan's features. "Mr. Hoffman, Julie, I'll leave now."

Liam and Julie nodded in acknowledgment.

As Tristan was about to depart, he deliberately turned his gaze toward Niko. His tone turned chilly as he delivered a stern scolding.

"Niko, if the Williams family dares to covet this contract again, be prepared for substantial compensation for Julie!"

Niko's face turned pale as he tremulously agreed.

Julie didn't react until Tristan and his men departed from the Williams Group.

She didn't anticipate that Tristan would stand up for her and arrange for a twenty-million compensation from Niko on her behalf. Furthermore, the contract with Red Murray Group was now securely in her possession.

Patty, glancing at Liam, murmured to herself, "I can't shake the feeling that Liam's orchestrating Tristan's moves. Or is it just my imagination?"

Curious, Julie inquired, "Liam, how did you manage to do this?"

"Mr. Murray values fairness. Knowing your contract was unfairly taken by the Williams family, he couldn't stand idly by," Liam replied with a chuckle, opting not to divulge the truth.

After contemplating for a moment, Julie found Liam's words reasonable. She nodded in acknowledgment.

Upon hearing Liam's words, Patty curled her lips and muttered scornfully under her breath, "I thought Liam had some connections! It became apparent now that it all stemmed from Mr. Murray's integrity and sense of justice. Liam is still just a loser!"

Upon realizing that Liam had no involvement with Tristan's actions, Doyle stormed up to Liam, his face red. He shouted angrily, "Liam, give us the bank card back!"

With a sneer, Liam retorted, "This is a gift from Mr. Murray. I see no reason to return it to you. Fuck off! If you dare to stir trouble again, my fist will not hesitate to land on you!"

Rolling up his sleeves, Doyle moved forward as if to strike Liam.

With a disdainful expression, Liam swiftly kicked Doyle before he could throw a punch.

Due to the force of the kick, Doyle was sent sprawling to the floor. Clutching his stomach, Doyle let out a pained wail.

Niko, who also wanted to fight Liam, was taken aback when he saw this. Realizing he couldn't match Liam's strength, he had no choice but to step back.

As Niko stepped away, Liam's voice cut through the air. "Niko, stop playing tricks on us with your son. Otherwise, the Williams Group might be destroyed next time!"

After that statement, Liam departed from the market department without waiting for Niko's reply, accompanied by Julie.

Doyle, lying on the floor, glared in the direction Liam had gone, his eyes burning with resentment.

Seeing no employees around, Doyle unleashed a flurry of curses.

"Fuck you, Liam! I'll kill you! Just wait and see, Julie! Mark my words. Your Pearl Company will be destroyed!"

Niko refrained from insulting them. Instead, he devised a plan.

Approaching Doyle, he whispered, "Doyle, I've figured out how to get back at Liam and Julie."
