Liam grinned. "Since he's your friend, I agree."

He meant that he would meet this person for Bowen's sake.

Bowen, grasping the implication, nodded and gestured to a woman nearby.

"Sonia, please bring Mr. Murray here."

Liam's gaze landed on her, recognizing Sonia, the one who had presented a gift at Asher's birthday on Bowen's behalf.

Catching Liam's gaze, Bowen introduced Sonia with a smile. "General Hoffman, this is my daughter, Sonia Harvey. She was the one who delivered the gift at Asher's birthday party."

Liam then realized Sonia was Bowen's daughter and felt slightly embarrassed for not inviting her to dinner that time.

Julie, also recognizing Sonia, frowned.

Bowen continued, "I hoped Sonia could assist you, General Hoffman. But with Julie's competence, you hardly need her."

At this, Sonia's disappointment showed briefly.

Julie noticed Sonia's expression and felt a twinge of jealousy.

"You flatter me, Mr. Harvey. Miss Sonia is quite capable, too," Julie said, squeezing Liam's arm discreetly.

Liam felt resigned about Julie's jealousy.

Then, Tristan arrived.

Liam's smile broadened at the sight of the 'old friend' Bowen had mentioned. Tristan was practically an old friend of his as well.

"General Hoffman, a pleasure to meet you. I'm Tristan, chairman of the Red Murray Group," Tristan said, beaming in front of Liam.

Liam smiled.

He wasn't taken aback by Tristan's arrival. Given Tristan's earlier actions, Liam sensed his eagerness to align with him.

Thus, Liam warmly greeted Tristan.

Julie, by his side, was initially taken aback.

Then, realization struck her. She pointed at Liam and Tristan and exclaimed, "So, it was Liam's strategy that led you to the Williams Group that

Tristan confirmed with a smile. "Indeed, but let's not forget the Pearl Company's own merits."

Julie's laughter rang out, clearly delighted by Tristan's compliment.

Then, Tristan turned to Liam. "General Hoffman, I've heard about your plans against Kingland Group. I'm here to offer my support."

Liam grasped Tristan's intent right away.

Clearly, Tristan was declaring his allegiance, ready to stand by Liam.

Liam responded with a grateful nod, recognizing Tristan's acumen. Even without firm commitment, Tristan's support was valuable.

Tristan, too, was thrilled. Aligning with Liam, a five-star general, was a significant advantage.

Soon after, Bowen beckoned everyone to take their seats.

Two hours flew by, and the banquet concluded.

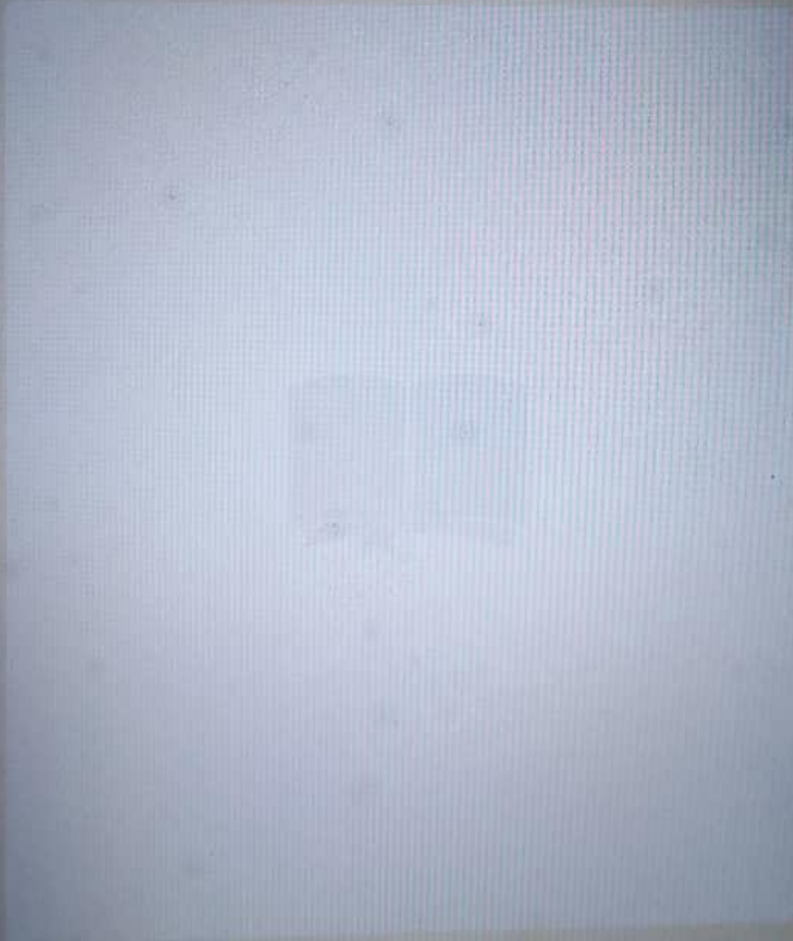

Liam, holding Julie's hand and carrying Asher, rose and announced, "As for the Wolf Gang, the Williams family, and the Ortiz family, I'll leave them to you to deal with. Carsen, stay here. Assist Bowen and the others with this."

With that, Liam departed Bowen's residence with his family.
