

Chapter 1724 Have You Calmed Down

Brandon was well aware of Janet's penchant for holding grudges. So, with a smile, he stepped closer to her and asked, "Still upset?"

Ignoring Brandon's words, Janet stood up, turned around and left.

Brandon frowned resignedly, wearing a bitter smile on his face, and quickened his pace to catch up with Janet. Once he'd caught up with her, he reached out and grabbed her by the arm.

Janet attempted to wrestle her arm free from Brandon's grasp, but found herself powerless against his strength.

Having no alternative, she came to a halt. Then, she turned around, shooting Brandon an intense stare without uttering a single word. ①

Brandon rubbed his forehead in resignation, a mix of anger and amusement on his face. With a penitent expression, he said, "I'm sorry, I shouldn't have spanked you. Could you please forgive me?"

Janet cast a scornful glance at Brandon,

"I know I was wrong, but you shouldn't have taken the medicine without telling me. What if something had happened to you? I would've been worried sick."

Observing the worry and fear in Brandon's eyes, Janet's anger finally began to ease a little bit.

Sensing a potential shift in her mood, Brandon reiterated, "I was just so worried about you. Please don't be upset, okay?"

His voice had an exceptionally gentle tone to it, which immediately lifted Janet's spirits.

She turned around and looked at Brandon with raised eyebrows. Pouting her lips, she asked, "What brings you here so early in the morning?"

Brandon's eyebrows furrowed. He gazed at Janet, hesitated for a second, then answered, "I heard your cousin tried to take something from you by force in the garden last night. I was worried that you might've been hurt, so I came here as early as possible to check on you."

Upon Brandon's arrival, the prevailing calmness in the house gave him reason to believe that the troublemakers had left.

When Janet heard the word "cousin" from

Brandon, her body trembled slightly, a hint of fear flickering in her eyes. Lowering her gaze, she said, "What cousin? Luckily, they've never treated me as part of the family, so I assume I don't have to deal with them."

Janet shrugged dejectedly as she spoke.

"Early this morning, I was woken up by my grandmother and so-called cousin. My dad wanted my grandmother to stay here, but she insisted that Ansell remain with her. In the end, Dad had to see her off along with the rest of them."

Upon hearing this, Brandon felt a sense of relief.

He cast a meaningful glance at her, scanning her from head to toe, and said, "It's not safe here. Let's go home."

Janet shook her head. Since she had decided to leave home, she needed to show some backbone.

With a smile, she replied, "They were sent away early in the morning, so it's safe for me to stay now. You can rest assured of that."

This suggested that she wasn't going home with Brandon.

Observing her nonchalant demeanor, Brandon pursed his lips. Just as he was about to say something else, Janet spoke again.

"If you don't have any other matter to attend to, you can leave." With that, she headed upstairs.

Brandon tightly gripped her arm, preventing her from taking another step.

Having perceived the implication of Janet asking him to leave, Brandon rubbed his forehead wearily, asking, "Have you calmed down? When do plan on returning home?"
