

Chapter 1754 What Do You Want This Time

A smirk played on Locke's lips as he remarked confidently, "I have my methods."

His eyes, resembling two small torches beneath his thick eyebrows, gleamed fixedly on Mandy without a break. The intense gaze appeared as if it could envelop her at any given moment.

Standing there, Mandy experienced a sense of enchantment under the familiar gaze.

In her memories spanning from childhood to the present, whenever confronted with a challenging situation, the intervention of Locke consistently led to a safe resolution.

Whether rooted in childhood experiences or the captivating gaze of Locke, she inexplicably opted to place her trust in him.

But this time, Mandy showed more savvy. Without waiting for Locke to speak, she asked, "You're not offering help without getting something in return, are you?"

To her question, Locke raised an eyebrow, and the gleam in his eyes intensified. "Nope. I'm a businessman; we don't do things for free."

Chapter 1754 What Do You Want Thi 📺 +120 Points at most
Mandy, he said earnestly, "I want you to shout to the world that we're engaged."

Upon hearing this, Mandy tightly furrowed her brow. In embarrassment, she averted her face and avoided looking at him.

She found it truly challenging.

Nonetheless, as Mandy tilted her head, she noticed Draco not far away. In addition to the problematic Amelia, there were also several police officers surrounding him.

Witnessing Draco's furrowed brow and perceiving his irritated and helpless expression, Mandy experienced a twinge of heartache. The words, "I no longer care about W Marks," were on the verge of escaping her lips but were restrained.

Suddenly, Mandy's eyes lit up, indicating that she had seemingly thought of a viable solution.

She contemplated that compromising with Locke to some extent might be tolerable. After all, from childhood until now, she had deceived Locke on numerous occasions.

If Locke mentioned the engagement announcement, she could easily renege on her promise. After all, Locke couldn't take any action against her.

However, before Mandy could utter a word, Locke extended his arm and took hold of hers, pulling her towards him.

Chapter 1754 What Do You Want Thi 🎁 +120 Points at most

In this instance, the two were almost in close proximity to each other.

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

