

Chapter 1035 Cause Trouble In Invone

Seeing Liam had crafted a plan, Julie was eager to dive into the details.

"What's our next move? Shouldn't we head straight to rescue our son from the clutches of the Duncan family?" Her words were filled with urgency.

But Liam shook his head and explained, "No. We mustn't show our hand too openly, or we'll put them on high alert. Instead, I propose we create a diversion to draw the Duncan family out. If we play our cards right, they might even make the first move. Our current position is too vulnerable for a direct confrontation."

Liam looked at Julie and Shayla to gauge their reaction to his strategy.

They exchanged glances, a silent agreement passing between them before Shayla spoke up with a casual shrug. "Sounds good to me."

Julie echoed her sentiment, signaling her approval.

Encouraged by their support, Liam laid out the plan with newfound determination. "Alright, then it's settled! Julie, stick with me. Your strength isn't up to par for solo missions. Shayla, you're on your own. We'll split into two teams and target the Duncan family's illicit

"The bigger the mess, the better. And if we can drag officials into this, all the better. The power dynamics in Invone are complex. Stirring the pot will give us the cover we need to make our move. Just remember, safety is paramount. Abort the mission if anything feels off," he added.

Shayla understood the gravity of the situation. Her nod was solemn and determined.

However, Julie suddenly interjected, "Liam, I'd rather join Shayla in her efforts!"

Liam's frown deepened, betraying his concern for Julie's safety should she team up with Shayla.

Julie, sensing his hesitation, said, "Staying by your side, I'll only distract you with my need for protection. You won't have a moment's peace to plan our next move. Besides, as a Primogem Warrior, I'm eager to test and strengthen my skills in real battle. I refuse to be your burden!"

Liam found himself unexpectedly touched by her resolve. Despite the fact that the Heart of Life was no longer in Julie's body, its long-term nourishment had significantly enhanced Julie's physical condition, propelling her to the rank of a first-level Primogem Warrior in remarkably short time.

Recognizing her newfound resilience and unwilling to dampen her spirit, he conceded with a heavy heart. "Alright, Julie. Just promise me you'll stay safe. Shayla, she might not have your strength. Look out for her, will you?"

Shayla, attempting to lighten the mood, flashed a mischievous grin. "Worry not. Why would I harm my rival in love? Imagine, when we're all one big happy family, I'll have to respectfully call her 'sister'!"

Liam was at a loss for words, caught between the gravity of their situation and Shayla's levity.

Yet, her lighthearted pledge offered him some comfort. "Let's reconvene here tonight," he proposed. "Julie, Shayla, please, be careful out there."

With a final look of concern and a nod of assurance, he bid the two women farewell.
