

Chapter 1110 The Past Of Shayla

Shayla and Laura eased their tension slightly upon hearing Liam mention something of significance.

Prior to delving into business matters, Laura rose on her toes and planted a kiss on Liam's cheek, followed by a playful complaint. "Since Shayla has already kissed you, it would be unfair if I don't get a kiss, too!"

Liam glanced at Shayla reflexively, worried that she might also attempt to kiss him.

Fortunately, Shayla remained composed, sparing Liam from further kisses that might overwhelm him.

Observing that both women were ready to calm down, Liam queried Shayla in a low voice, "What have you endured recently?"

Shayla's expression turned somber when Liam broached the topic, yet she bravely answered the question, her voice quivering as she narrated the brutal torture she had endured recently.

Furthermore, Shayla openly disclosed that her brother Britton had been imprisoned by the Glyn family.

Upon hearing that, Liam's gaze turned dark, casting a glance at the unconscious Garrett beside him, his eyes filled with an undeniable intent to seek retribution.

Shayla's countenance mirrored her distress.

Realizing the gravity of the situation, Liam opted not to press further, understanding the need to allow Shayla time to process her ordeal. He shifted the conversation, saying, "So, you hail from the Alvarado family?"

Shayla nodded, unashamed of her lineage. "My family was betrayed by two subordinate families. The two families are the Glyn family and the Chapman family! They conspired with the Saint Society, thus acquiring significant power from the association."

Shayla's expression clouded over, indicating the deep pain associated with that memory.

Nonetheless, she did not evade the topic. Once composed, she proceeded with her account. "Following that, they turned against us, slaughtering our kin. My parents sacrificed themselves to shield my brother and me! Ultimately, my brother and I were the lone captives of the Alvarado family. As the sole surviving daughter, I endured torment at the hands of those wretches for an extended period, feeling utter despair."

After a pause, she continued, "Thus, I've been feigning strength, concealing the profound anguish within me. Recently, I was captured by the Glyn family again, where I discovered my brother, Britton, had been incarcerated in their dungeon to this day. The sole occasion I encountered my brother was during my humiliation by Garrett!"

Shayla's recounting brought a shadow over Liam's face. He hadn't anticipated such resonance between Shayla's ordeal and his own.

His demeanor turned icy cold.

Despite his rising anger, Liam made a conscious effort to quell it. He extended his hand and gently placed it on Shayla's shoulder, offering her reassurance in a soft tone. "There's no need to worry. Britton, your brother, will eventually be rescued!"

Shayla nodded, tears brimming in her eyes.

Meanwhile, Laura was visibly touched by Shayla's story. Looking at Shayla, Laura's previous resentment dissipated.

Her countenance shifted to a serious expression.

The Saint Society was the root cause of these successive tragedies!

Furthermore, the Chapman family was implicated in these events.

Similarly, the Glyn family, allied with the Chapman family, shared culpability. All the people from these families were unsavory characters.

Amidst Liam's and Laura's somber reflection on Shayla's sorrowful history, Garrett, previously unconscious, abruptly regained consciousness.

As Garrett regained awareness and witnessed Liam's comforting gesture towards Shayla, he misinterpreted the situation, casting a disdainful glare at Liam. He muttered, "Son of a bitch! No wonder you oppose me! Seems like you have feelings for this bitch Shayla!"
